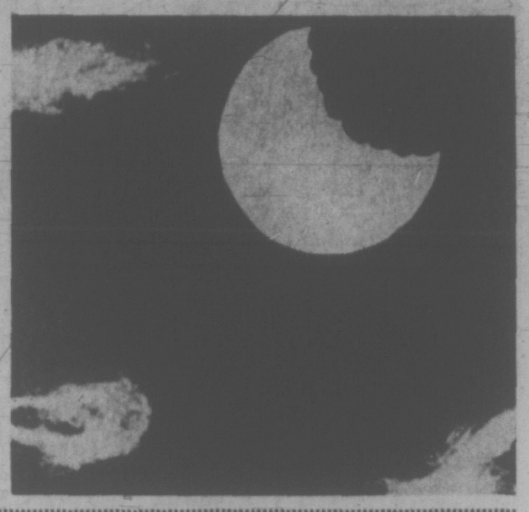
89th YEAR No. 27 ★★ VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1972 10 CENTS DAILY, 20 CENTS SATURDAY



BITE-SIZE ECLIPSE was not seen by Victorians Monday night because of cloud conditions. But Times photographer Bill Halkett using secret photography devices (nine-tenths imagination, one-tenth technology) managed to block out all but three cirrus wisps and snapped the celestial dragon chewing the moon into a partial eclipse. Astronomers have no appetites for scientific pies in the sky, yet who would doubt the sign of a hungry dragon?

June Unemployment Highest Ever

Times News Services

Unemployment across Canada jumped by 17,000 to 658,000 in June, the highest figure ever for that month, Statistics Canada reported today.

In June last year, the number of people without jobs was 551,000, or 6.2 per cent of the labor force. In percentage terms, however, unemployment this June was the same as June 1971, as the number of persons in the labor force increased.

Unemployment in British Columbia increased from 66,000 (7.1 per cent in June last year to 75,000 (7.7 per cent) this year. The June percentage was down from 8 per cent in May.

The increase across Canada occurred despite a greater-than-usual gain last month in over-all employment. But the creation of new jobs failed to catch up to the growing number of job-seekers.

There was a larger-than-usual increase in employment in manufacturing, and more jobs were spread through all other industries, though the increase in government employment was less than usual.

There were an estimated 320,000 unemployed young people, aged up to 24, and the unemployment rate in that age bracket rose to 12.4 per cent in June from 11.3 in May.

Unemployment for the 25-and-older workers declined to 249,000 in June from 283,000 in May, but remained above the June figure last year, 238,000. This meant that the unemployment rate for that group declined to 3.8 per cent from 4.3 per cent in May. It was 3.7 per cent in June last year.

The problem showed in the usual spring influx into the labor force of students — 14 to 19 — looking for either full-time or summer jobs.

In June this year, 47.5 per cent of all teen-aged boys in the country, and 35.1 per cent of all teen-aged girls, were either working or looking for work.

These rates compared with 36.5 and 28.1, respectively, only two months earlier when school was in. Both rates were higher this year than in June, 1971.

The number of unemployed teen-aged boys rose last month to 118,000 from 77,000 in May, and the number of unemployed teen-aged girls jumped to 66,000 from 45,000.

The labor force — employed and unemployed — rose to nearly 9.15 million last month from 8.89 million in May and 8.86 million in June last year. This was an increase of 3.3 per cent in the year.

The number of workers employed also rose 3.3 per cent in the year, to 8.58 million in June this year from 8.30 million a year earlier. It was 8.34 million in May this year.

Mass Jail Escape At Millhaven

CONVICTED MURDERER Edward Woods, one of 14 men who snipped their way to freedom from Ontario's maximum-security Millhaven penitentiary, was the first escaper recaptured when he tried to run a police roadblock five miles from the prison.

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Two escaped convicts were recaptured today as police armed with shotguns and high-powered rifles continued to track 12 of 14 dangerous prisoners — two of them convicted murderers — who cut their way out of Millhaven penitentiary in Canada's largest prison break on record.

Robert Clark, 38, of Tillsonburg, Ont., serving a life sentence, was captured by police and prison guards in a wooded area near the Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. plant about three miles from the prison.

Earlier, police captured convicted murderer Edward Woods, 26, of Burlington, Ont., after he tried to crash a roadblock at Odessa on Highway 2, five miles north of the prison.

No details were available on the Clark capture which came after police moved in on woods near the cement plant.

Woods was caught after police cruisers forced a stolen truck he was driving onto a lawn and officers wrestled him to the ground. A passenger escaped by running down a creek bed.

The 14 prisoners broke out of the maximum-security prison Monday night by cutting through a chain link fence.

Three of the escapers were convicted murderers and two of them are still at large. Of the others, police list most as dangerous.

An area within a radius of 30 miles from the prison has been sealed off by cruisers, boats and aircraft and the convicts are still believed to be within five miles of the prison.

Many of the prisoners at Millhaven were taken there after a four-day rebellion by 500 prisoners at nearby Kingston penitentiary in April, 1971, left two convicts dead, the institution wrecked and 10 other prisoners injured.

McGovern Clinches Nomination

Times News Services

MIAMI BEACH — Senator George McGovern clinched the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination today, going over the top minutes after his rivals Senators Hubert Humphrey and Edmund Muskie withdrew from the race.

An Associated Press poll showed a combination of newly-attracted delegates plus one-time supporters of Humphrey and Muskie added up to a first-ballot victory for McGovern.

"After consultation with some of my closest friends and supporters, I have determined that I will not permit my name to be entered in nomination at the convention, and I am now releasing my delegates to vote as they wish," Humphrey said.

Muskie said he was quitting because it was apparent that McGovern was going to be the nominee. Under these circumstances, Muskie said, there was no point in having his name even introduced into nomination.

Humphrey's decision virtually assures McGovern of a first-ballot win when voting for the party's presidential nominee begins Wednesday evening.

McGovern just 43 votes short of the 1,509 needed for victory and Humphrey's 429-plus delegates, many of them almost sure to back him, will put him easily past the required quota.

According to associates, Humphrey decided to pull out of the race following George McGovern's decisive victory in the crucial California credentials fight.

Humphrey aides said he felt it was an indication that the South Dakotan had the votes to capture the nomination.

McGovern recaptured 151 California delegates with stunning ease early today, salting Humphrey's coalition of old-line Democrats dead in its tracks about five hours after the first gavel fell starting the party's "new look" nominating convention.

He triumphed by an unofficial tally of 1,618 to 1,239 — far more than the 1,433-vote majority required under ground rules laid down by party chairman Lawrence O'Brien.

McGovern had contended throughout his battle that Humphrey, teaming with most of his other competitors, had unfairly upset the winner-take-all rule in California after agreeing in advance to accept the primary results.

'GREAT ESCAPE' A SINKING FLOP

LAKE GEORGE, N.Y. (UPI) — Escape artist Mario Manzini had one of those days Monday.

As promised, the 30-year-old Manzini allowed himself to be handcuffed, leg-ironed and placed in a packing crate which was then nailed shut and lowered into Lake George.

Also as promised, he escaped from the box in less than 90 seconds.

So far, so good. Except for several small problems.

All of the 300 persons who had gathered on the dock to witness the great escape patterned after the stunt by the late Harry Houdini, could hear and see exactly how it was done.

First of all, as the box was being nailed shut, the sound of shackles being removed inside could be heard loud and clear. Then the box wouldn't sink and bobbed around on the surface.

Suddenly, a concealed door in the box popped open and Mancini popped out, in full view of all.

Fallers Put IWA Out on Limb

Determination by fallers to continue their walkout is likely to render academic the narrow vote in favor of a new contract by coast members of the International Woodworkers of America.

Representatives of the 115 companies were meeting in Vancouver this afternoon to vote on a recommendation by their bargaining agent, Forest Industrial Relations, that they also accept the new contract.

Fallers, however, remain adamant that they want a standardized pricing formula for their varying piece-rates, and not the day wage rate proposed in the settlement.

The official IWA vote was to be announced today. Unofficially, the union announced that 6,730 were in favor and 5,915 opposed, or 53 per cent. Roughly half the IWA members didn't vote.

At noon, a brief IWA statement said the coast negotiating committee "has advised FIR the union membership has accepted the proposed settlement.

"However, union picket lines will be maintained until such time as the industry has announced its acceptance."

The companies' vote was also expected to be announced late today.

But if the fallers don't go back to work, log shortages evident before the official IWA strike began June 22 will worsen. Eight hundred fallers began walking out last April.

FLQ Man Protected

MONTREAL (CP) — One of the first Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists is protected by special status under France's foreign affairs ministry, according to a local newspaper. The weekly tabloid Photo Journal says Richard Bizier, 27, has been granted status and documents as a Canadian refugee which prevent him from being extradited to Canada from any country without the approval of the French foreign ministry.

The newspaper says Bizier sought political asylum in the islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon, French territory off Newfoundland, while on bail facing charges in connection with the 1968 St. Jean Baptiste Day riot.

Bizier was charged with disturbing a public gathering and participating in a riot. A warrant for his arrest is outstanding.

A spokesman for the newspaper said Bizier hid for some time in Quebec's Abitibi region and made it to French territory by mid-1970.

Bizier served four months of a six-month sentence for placing a time bomb at an RCAF building in 1963 during the first wave of FLQ bombings.

The newspaper says Bizier was issued documents Nov. 26, 1971, by the French Office for the Protection of Refugees and Stateless Persons.

TORONTO (CP) — Non-emergency operations were postponed in all Toronto hospitals today as Red Cross blood supplies dwindled to half their normal reserve.

BORIS BEGINS WITHOUT BOBBY

REYKJAVIK (AP) — World championship chess began today without Bobby Fischer, the American challenger.

He showed up seven minutes after Soviet titleholder Boris Spassky made the first move.

It seemed another one of these psychological ploys that chess masters often use in an attempt to unsettle their opponents.

Spassky was there on the dot, waited a minute, then calmly pushed his queen's pawn forward two spaces.

Referee Lothar Schmid of West Germany pushed the button on the time clock and the match had begun.

Seven minutes later Fischer appeared.

With long strides he sped to the black leather swivel chair placed behind the white side of the board.

Applause, which greeted Fischer's arrival, increased when Spassky moved forward from the side of the stage where he had been waiting to shake Fischer's hand.

The American took a minute to regard the board and the queen's pawn opening Spassky favors.

He moved his king's side knight to the queen bishop three square.

Melon Bombs Out

Times News Services

That watermelon bomb which landed on the front pages in Canada and the U.S. yesterday, Monday night went S-P-L-A-T-T . . . all over the faces of several Los Angeles police officers.

They're the policemen, who conned newsmen into believing that a giant watermelon brought into a precinct house for a snack by two patrolmen was actually evidence in a case of "assault with a deadly watermelon," and had been dropped with felonious intent on the head of an area resident by a peeved girl friend.

However, further investigation into the case by senior detectives showed that the alleged occurrence never took place. As a result, several officers face suspensions without pay for the hoax.

So, unfortunately, the Great Melon Caper just doesn't hold water.

Protestants Menace IRA

Times News Services

BELFAST — Tough-talking Protestants threatened today to "eliminate" the Irish Republican Army if the British army does not take action against the "murderers and rebels."

"Unless the army takes the initiative, we will take steps to eliminate the IRA ourselves," the Ulster Defence Association declared in a statement.

The grim warning came on the eve of Wednesday's Orange Order parades, planned to commemorate the 1690 Battle of the Boyne which established Protestant domination over Northern Ireland's Catholics. In past years, the parades have sparked violence.

About 500 additional British soldiers are to arrive in Ireland today. Another 700 will follow later, bringing to 17,000 the number of soldiers on duty there.

The UDA, whose leaders claim they can call up 40,000 armed men, denounced the 13-day IRA ceasefire which ended Sunday. They called on Northern Ireland secretary William Whitelaw not to negotiate with the IRA, "who are nothing but murderers and rebels."

In response to the UDA "elimination" threat, a rank-and-file IRA member commented: "This is the sort of thing we have been expecting for some time now. We're not really worried but we see it as our clear duty to defend our areas."

The body of a young man, hooded and gagged, was found early today in Carlisle Circus, a predominantly Protestant neighborhood.

Sporadic gunfire continued through the night in several areas of Belfast, and just after midnight a 100-pound bomb demolished shops near the Roman Catholic Unity Flats housing block. One bystander was slightly injured.

In London, the disclosure by William Whitelaw that he met representatives of the underground Irish Republican Army in his capacity as minister of Ulster affairs won support from the opposition Labor party but stirred hostile reaction in some Conservative quarters.

Denied Lawyer, Man Beats .08

HALIFAX (CP) — A charge of driving with a blood alcohol level of more than .08 was dismissed in court Monday when the defendant said he was not permitted to call a lawyer.

It was the first breath analysis machine case here since the Supreme Court of Canada recently ruled that a person has a right to call a lawyer before taking a breath test.

Crown Prosecutor Dick Hubley said he would appeal the decision.

BANDIT BLINDS VICTIMS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Police are searching for a bandit who they said gouged out the eyes of two of his holdup victims after robbing them of small amounts.

Investigators said Monday they are "quite sure" that grocer Samuel C. Schafer, 72, and gasoline station attendant Robert Paro, 19, were victims of the same bandit, although a second man was with him during the attack on Paro.

Schafer was choked, robbed of $21 and blinded early Sunday at his grocery store.

Before dawn Monday, less than 24 hours later, Paro was accosted at a service station, choked, robbed of $10 and also blinded.

Detective Lieut. Andrew Sparacino theorized that the bandit blinded his victims so that they could not identify him later.

Paro, meanwhile, was reported in critical condition in hospital. Investigators said they were unable to question him because he was delerious.

Schafer's condition was listed as good.

Police said that in both holdups no weapon was used, and fingers were used to blind the victims.

Waterfront 'Should Be for Living'

There is no point in having plenty of promenades skirting the Inner Harbor unless people can live downtown and use the facilities, architect John Di Castri said Monday.

"Otherwise all you have is a parade ground," he told members of the Central Business District Advisory Committee.

Di Castri's comment came after one of the businessmen asked the aldermen present what type of development was envisaged for the waterfront property lying between the proposed Reid Centre on Wharf Street and the Johnson Street Bridge.

The land should be considered for some type of residential use, Di Castri suggested, to inject life into that area of the city.

"Regardless of the design merits of the Reid Centre, that kind of thing going there is going to save Bastion Square.

"For six weeks of the year there are people in the square but for the rest of the year it's just a windswept empty space."

A planning department spokesman said later the stretch of waterfront in question is extremely "fragmented," including city-owned parcels and rights of way, a pile driving company, a cannery and a ship's chandlers.

The spokesman was doubtful whether the privately-held land could be assembled to enable any type of major comprehensive development.

On another item of committee business Di Castri made a similar plea for consideration of the human element.

After Ald. Percy Frampton described council's concern at the problem of sidewalk clutter caused by sandwich boards, postcard racks and other displays outside store fronts, Di Castri appealed for some flexibility in enforcing the bylaw.

If such items as flower baskets and fruit stalls were eliminated in a total ban on sidewalk commercialism "everything would be neat and tidy but there would be no space for people," he said.

Another member, Norman Ross, agreed that such displays added to the atmosphere of a city's streets, which otherwise would be "as sterile as a hospital corridor."

In other business, chairman Ald. Clyde Savage announced that he was considering the appointment of more members to the 15-man advisory committee, to ensure a broader range in interests represented and also to guarantee a good minimum attendance at monthly meetings.

He predicted a busy period would start in the fall, and the committee could become "a very important part of what happens in the city of Victoria."

Savage told members he would like to see a greater input of ideas and suggestions concerning Victoria's central area, which could be passed on to council.

Hospital Engineers Seek Independent Arbitration

Hospital engineers in British Columbia are willing to accept binding arbitration outside the B.C. Mediation Commission, a union spokesman said today.

The comment was made by Ed Callan, international representative of the International Union of Operating Engineers, following an 80-per-cent strike vote among 140 men at 27 hospitals including Royal Jubilee and Queen Victoria.

Callan said he will suggest to other union officials that another attempt be made to bring the B.C. Hospitals Association back to the bargaining table.

"I will suggest that we ask them to sit down and negotiate — if not, we will have no alternative but to serve 72 hours strike notice," he said.

"We are not prepared to go before the B.C. Mediation Commission. But we are prepared to go before an independent arbitrator with the understanding that this report would be binding on both parties."

The union has sought a 12-per-cent wage increase for third-class engineers to bring them in line with other hospital tradesmen, Callan said. The hospitals have offered 6.25 per cent, the same figure as granted to the Hospital Employees Union earlier this year in a binding decision by the mediation commission.

Third-class engineers now earn $834.25 a month.

DRUGS 'A SYMPTOM' OF OTHER PROBLEMS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Drugs are a sumptom of other problems, not an end in themselves, and schools should conduct their counselling programs with this in mind, a Narcotics Addiction Foundation spokesman told a seminar on drug addiction Monday.

John Russell, director of NAF research and education, told 92 seminar delegates at the University of British Columbia that discussion of school, family and personal problems in school should take priority over handing out drug information.

"We do not see many people with a serious drug problem who do not have other serious problems," he said.

Parole Reforms Let Crime Pay Too Well: Police

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Parole reform has made crime a better paying proposition than a university education, says Guy Marcil, president of Montreal's 5,000-man Policemen's Brotherhood.

And the heads of all provincial police associations agreed with him Monday that reform of the prison reform system by the federal government went too far.

"Crime pays," Mr. Marcil said during the annual conference of the Canadian Police Association.

"It's better than a university education. If you go into crime todey your chances of success are very good. And if you end up in jail all the benefits are on the side of the criminal."

The leaders of provincial associations, sitting on a panel with Mr. Marcil, agreed that the grounds for granting parole should be tightened.

So did Sydney Brown of Toronto, president of the association, in an opening address which also was critical of changing conditions within prisons.

"If we maintain our present reckless and rudderless course of stupidity and senselessness then shortly our courts will be issuing rain checks to prisoners in case they don't approve of the surroundings or conditions," Mr. Brown said.

He urged all policemen to take a more active part in politics.

"Make a concerted effort to attend political rallies and seekout 'publicly the opinions of office-seekers on all the issues that affect law enforcement," he said, police should work to get suitable candidates elected, regardless of party affiliation.

Mr. Brown said the future of capital punishment should be decided by a national referendum, not by Parliament.

ASKS TWO-PART VOTE

He called for a two-part vote on the issue, the first to determine whether capital punishment should be retained; and the second to decide if the death penalty should be kept for murder of police officers and prison guards.

A five-year trial period which abolished capital punishment except when the murder involved policemen and guards ends this December, when Parliament is expected to decide whether the abolition will continue indefinitely.

During the trial period no one has been executed although the death sentence has been given to people convicted of killing police officers. In each case the sentence was commuted by the federal cabinet, Mr. Brown said.

"Is the Canadian government truly wants to resolve this issue and is really desirous of satisfying the wants of the Canadian people, then let it be placed on a referendum."

International Camp Opens

Children from 11 nations will gather Wednesday on the grounds of St. Margaret's School in Saanich for the Children's Summer International Village.

The four-week camp, one of about 20 being held around the world this year, is intended to promote international understanding and friendship for children.

There will be two boys, two girls and a leader from each of the 11 countries involved.

Each child will be 11 years old.

Participating in the international village this year will be children from Belgium, Costa Rica, Denmark, France, Germany, Japan, Sweden, the Netherlands, the Philippines the U.S. and Canada. In addition, junior consellors will be coming from the U.S., Denmark and Canada.

The camp will continue until Aug. 9, with an open house for visitors to be held July 22.

Probe of RCMP

REGINA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer agreed Monday to take an "in-depth" look at the RCMP's internal disciplinary procedures.

Goyer made the statement after a meeting with former RCMP corporal Jack Ramsay, who recently wrote an article for a national magazine in which he said morale in the force was low, the alcoholic rate high and the suicide rate serious.

The chance meeting Monday resulted from a conversation between the two on a CKCK radio open-line show.

Goyer agreed to meet with Ramsay immediately after the show and the two talked for more than 45 minutes in an office at the radio station.

"Mr. Ramsay is most concerned about the disciplinary actions in the force and this is of concern to me," Goyer said following the meeting.

"I am much concerned with the rights of the individual."

The former RCMP corporal, who says his only objective in bringing his changes to the public is to attack the cause of the problems, said he wants to leave things in the hands of Goyer.

"If this leads to changes it will have a tremendous effect on morale," Ramsay said.

"If I thought I would have been able to meet with Mr. Goyer in the first place I never would have written the article."

He said a member of the force could never talk to a member of Parliament for fear of being charged and sentenced to a maximum of one year imprisonment.

timistic about how long a general return to work would last.

"The real problem is the fallers," he said. "I suspect a lot of mill workers don't understand this problem. They are going to be affected by it nevertheless.

"There is already an acute shortage of logs. The mills will probably be able to operate for only a week or two."

Chuck Evans and Mike Davis, spokesmen for the fallers, said Monday night that more than 600 fallers voted against the proposed new contract, which includes a day rate of $80.52 for fallers.

No matter what happens to the new contract, "the fallers aren't returning to work and the steering committee is declaring that all falling is hot on the coast," said Evans.

"Also we're going to declare that all wood that's coming up from the United States is hot, too. We're going to try and stop this flow from coming in from south of the border."

The fallers want a standard piece-rate formula to replace the present system under which rates vary widely from camp to camp.

"Some of the fallers were making up to $150 a day," Davis said. "Generally the average is about $11,200 a year because they can't work that many days what with adverse weather, fire season and so forth.

"Then these dictators (union leadership) go out and negotiate for $80 a day. It's crazy."

Another sore point is safety. Under the proposed day rate, scalers would no longer be necessary to go around and tabulate the amount of wood cut by the fallers.

"The scalers would not be needed to take inventory, therefore there's no safety check for a guy working alone out there," he said.

UNDER LOG

"Take my own case. I was caught under a log once and spent three-quarters of an hour there. If the scaler hadn't come around I never would have got out of there."

Davis said statistics show that 175 fallers were killed on the coast between 1960 and 1970, and that 261 were partially or permanently disabled between 1965 and 1970.

Evans and Davis said the fallers are supported by a large segment of the general IWA membership.

"For instance, most rigging crews we've been in touch with say they won't work with scabs if they try that on us," Davis said.

Caouette Urges Power For Workers

OTTAWA (CP) — Workers should participate in the ownership and management of businesses, says Real Caouette, Social Credit party leader.

In an article published Saturday, Caouette says the public currently finances enterprises by paying high prices as consumers, thus inflating prices and reducing their purchasing power.

"All new production should be financed by new credits and not with savings," he says.

Oak Bay Aids Boys With Camping Grant

Oak Bay council voted Monday to donate $1,000 to send 40 boys from low-income families in the municipality for a week of camping at the Boy Scouts' Camp Barnard in Sooke.

City Social worker and Scout assistant regional commissioner Jack Humble told council he had received "a very impassioned request from the Low Income Group."

Asked what other contributions the Scouts had received toward the project, Humble said Saanich had donated $1,000 to send 40 boys from the municipality to camp.

He said the provincial government had increased the $15 given for recreation of children and social assistance to $25 so that boys of welfare families could attend the camp.

He said the Victoria Rotary Club had also donated a little more than $800 toward the project, Operation Diamond.

Humble stressed that Oak Bay's $1,000 would be spent on boys from low-income families, not welfare cases.

The cost of sending each boy, plus transportation, would be $25. Staffing would be by volunteer Scout leaders, except for the paid kitchen staff.

Three one-week camps will be held from Aug. 14 to Sept. 3.

the weather

Unseasonably cool and wet weather will again dominate the weather picture over most of the province today as another of a series of Pacific frontal systems approach the B.C. coast. Strong winds are expected to accompany the next system along exposed coastal sections. Some breaks in the cloud cover over interior sections will result in temperatures near the mid seventies during the afternoon. Coastal communities will have temperatures in the sixty to sixty five degree range today.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes
This Special Hemorrhoid Remedy Contains A Unique Healing Substance That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids
One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.
If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.
In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.
All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

JUDY STARTS ON HOT-LINE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Judy LaMarsh, lawyer and former Liberal cabinet minister, launched a third career Monday as moderator of an open-line program on radio station CKWX.

Miss LaMarsh says while she is with CKWX she wants "to make the discussion of women and the women's role a regular theme of the program."

"I think this may be a better way than politics to improve the lot of women," she said in an interview.

The former secretary of state and health minister in the Lester Pearson government started her program off on an appropriate note by attacking open-line colleague Barry Clark for his office pin-up gallery.

★ ★ ★

Clark, the Liberal MLA for North Vancouver-Seymour, said he thought the women's liberation movement was composed of "frustrated females who have failed in the world of competition."

But he added he thought Miss LaMarsh had done a good job as secretary of state.

"Thanks for the crumb," Miss LaMarsh retorted.

The 47-year-old Niagara Falls lawyer said audience response to her program will determine whether or not she stays.

"I'm only here now for three weeks. If the response is good and I like the work I will stay.

★ ★ ★

"But it's a big decision. I have a law practice. Law has been my life's career. I haven't yet decided what to do."

One of Miss LaMarsh's rivals in the open-line business is Ed Murphy, formerly of CKWX and now of CKNW, who successfully sued her for libelling him in her book of political reminiscences, Bird in a Gilded Cage.

However, Miss LaMarsh said she was not worried about him. "In a few days, he is going to have to worry about me."

Odusa 100 Miles Ahead, 1,000 Miles From Maui

Odusa, the 53-foot ketch from Seattle, was 100 miles out in front of the fleet Monday with 1,000 miles to go in the Victoria to Maui yacht race.

The 16-yacht fleet was in two distinct groups, with eight boats in each.

Odusa was leading the most southerly group which had picked up the trade winds and made an average of 180 miles Monday, the ninth day of the race.

Fighting for second position were the Vancouver yacht Flame — leader of the northerly group — and three boats in the south group — Nautical II, Cherokee and Comotion, all of Seattle.

The north group had lost its gamble in taking the great circle route — the direct route to Maui — in hopes of missing the Pacific high, an area of light winds.

Two days ago, Flame was in the lead and it appeares she had won the gamble.

Now, however, Odusa and her runners-up were winning out with better winds on the longer way round.

With nine days gone, Odusa was 100 miles ahead of the position held on that day by the Vancouver yacht Graybeard in 1970, the last race. Graybeard won then in record time of just over 15 days, so that if Odusa's progress is maintained, the record could again be broken.

Odusa would not necessarily be over-all winner, however. At 53-feet she has a big handicap, and the little 32-foot Cherokee could well be the winner on corrected time.

School Trial Continues

An experiment in programming at a local junior high school has received the approval of the Greater Victoria school board's education committee and is likely to be carried on for another two years.

The school, Central Junior High, has been operating on a quarterly semester system. The school year has been divided into four nine-week units and students take different courses each quarter from different teachers.

Students are still required to take the core subject of English, Social Studies, physical education and guidance as well as other courses like mathematics and science, but there is more room for experimenting with other types of options without necessarily sacrificing a whole year in a course which does not turn out as expected.

In a report to the school board's education committee, a three-man evaluation committee studying the Central project recommended that it be carried on for another two years and then given a final evaluation.

The education committee went along with the suggestion and will recommend this action at next Monday's regular school board meeting.

The evaluation committee found that teachers, parents and students all have overwhelmingly approved of the new system, as opposed to the normal year of seven or eight courses taken over the full 10-month school year.

It was found that attendance figures were higher under the new system, there were more promotions in each grade and damage to school property and vandalism declined.

Central principal Bill Garner said it is encouraging to see the support given the project by the parents, staff and students of the school. Ninety-five per cent of each of the three groups felt the step was advantageous, he said.

"We're not saying that this is the be-all or the end-all for education," Garner said. "It has worked well for us here but that doesn't mean it would for everybody."

"In no way are we saying that our system is superior to programs in other junior high schools," he said.

Garner said the project is in keeping with the school board's educational philosophy and that the school has been able to reach students it hadn't been able to reach before.

He said the students are able to work more at their own speeds than in the previous system and are working harder than before.

Liberals Pick A Second Anderson

City stockbroker Malcolm Anderson, 38-year-old elder brother of Provincial Liberal Leader David Anderson, was nominated by acclamation Monday night to carry the Grit banner into the next British Columbia election.

He will represent the Liberals in Saanich and the Islands, and his nomination was "in a way my own (his) surprise."

OPPOSITION

So far, he is up against Social Credit nominee Foster Isherwood. And he may also have to take on John Tisdalle, incumbent Socred beat out by Isherwood at the Social Credit nominating convention in April.

After his nomination Malcolm Anderson said in a brief interview he decided to stand last Wednesday. About three weeks ago, in a notice of the nominating convention to local party member over his signature, there was the suggestion they would be "surprised" at the candidate offered.

WANT PLATFORM

Robert's Rules of Parliamentary Procedure took second place to expediency Monday night at the Gordon Head Community Centre, as the stockbroker's bid for the nomination went to the floor of the meeting.

Long before he was confirmed as candidate, active Liberals were demanding a capsulized platform from him.

Until his nomination was confirmed, he fell back on the public platform of the Liberals.

Malcolm Anderson was born in Victoria May 23, 1934. He has spent most of his life in the city and holds several community service offices.

He was deucated at St. Michael's; Loretto School in Scotland; and Victoria College, graduating in 1955.

He also holds a Bachelor of Commerce degree from the University of British Columbia, achieved in 1957.

He is married, with two daughters.

AT COLLEGE

His first recorded Liberal connection was in 1954, when he formed the first Liberal club at Victoria College.

He is a present: a director of Silver Threads; a director of Pacific Convention Centre; a lecturer at Camosun College, night school classes; a past director of the University of Victoria Alumni Association; and a past director of the Victoria Symphony Society.

There were 57 people at the nominating meeting, about 40 of whom were voting delegates.

Socreds Battle Over Nomination

SALMON ARM (CP) — George Driediger, president of the provincial Social Credit League, has been asked to clarify a chairman's ruling during a bitter Shuswap provincial riding meeting that picked incumbent Willis Jefcoat as the Social Credit candidate.

The complaint is that 17 supporters of Jefcoat's opponent, J. H. (Len) Galbraith, were not allowed to vote in the meeting last Thursday because they had not received membership cards from party headquarters.

STRAIGHTEN MESS

Galbraith said Monday that he has phoned Driediger who was "going" to come here to straighten out this mess.

The 17 persons, more than half of Galbraith's supporters, had receipts to show they had paid for memberships in time to be eligible to vote at the Meeting.

But chairman Peere Paynter of Sicamous ruled they were not members until they possessed membership cards.

Of 77 persons at the meeting, only 45 were ruled eligible to vote. The Galbraith supporters, almost all new members, claim the 17 disallowed were crucial.

In making his ruling, Paynter said he had received "orders in writing" that he was to allow only card-holding members of the Social Credit party to vote. He said he did not have the letter of instruction with him.

Fuel was added to the controversy when a woman who identified herself as a long-time party member said she had often voted without a card and had never been challenged.

Paynter replied that that was because she was an established member. His ruling, he said, applied only to new applicants.

Under pressure from angry Galbraith supporters, he agreed that his ruling could be appealed to party headquarters after the meeting.

Sidney 'Bulldozing' Plan For Pool—Alderman

Charges that Sidney council is "bulldozing through" a proposal for a municipal swimming pool were made Monday night by Ald. Fred Robinson.

A referendum on the pool is expected to be held in August. Provincial government approval for the loan authorization bylaw has already been received.

Mayor Stan Dear said he was not prepared to support a construction referendum for a skating-curling complex proposed by the Saanich Peninsula Agricultural and Recreational Association.

Two weeks ago, council was asked by this organization to present a referendum on the complex at the same time as the pool referendum.

Mayor Dear said that although he favored support on a tri-municipal basis of the SPARA complex, he had spoken with mayors of Central and North Saanich who said they were not prepared to consider it at this time.

Comparing SPARA projections with costs of the Colwood complex, Dear said the local figures were optimistic and predicted actual costs to exceed $1 million, rather than the estimated $680,000.

Colwood residents are paying more than five mills for their centre, which serves a population of 18,000, said the mayor. SPARA is asking Sidney, with a population of only 5,000, to support a project of the same size.

Ald. Robinson insisted that it is council's duty to work out a satisfactory solution.

"It's silly to spend nearly $150,000 on a pool when the whole thing could be jelled into one complex," he protested.

Ald. Hugh Hollingworth and Ald. Wilkie Gardiner supported the mayor's view. Ald. Chris Anderson is on vacation.

The pool site is still unsettled although council is considering several locations, one of them the park property on Resthaven Drive opposite the senior citizens' centre.

FANS STORM RAY CHARLES FORUM SHOW

TORONTO (CP) — A record-breaking crowd of more than 12,000 jammed the Forum of Ontario Place Saturday night to see and hear singer-pianist Ray Charles.

The turnout was so large that many persons had to find space on the grassy slopes that provide overflow seating for the open-air theatre.

The slopes were so crowded that some people could not find a place to sit and tempers ran high as the Charles fans waited through two hours of warm-up acts.

Not for Export

Alberta's Environmental Minister Bill Yurko has stated his province's stand on the issue of fresh water export to the United States a little more explicitly than has the government of British Columbia, but the meaning is just the same.

Mr. Yurko says: "This province does not have any surplus water after all local uses are taken into consideration." That puts it briefly, clearly and unarguably.

British Columbia's government spokesmen have clothed the same idea in more diplomatic words. In essence they are that B.C. does not know exactly how much fresh water it has and certainly will not consider export until it finds out and also determines how much it requires for ultimate needs in the future.

The positions adopted by the two provinces are not antagonistic either to one another or to the rest of Canada. They do, however, reveal a shoulder to shoulder stance against the so-called "continental" concept advanced periodically by United States interests.

Canadians may share a general sympathy for American areas which are short of fresh water — short because some of the territory is arid, and short, also, because heavy industrial activity in some locations has caused excessive pollution. Reconditioning the latter supply is a costly undertaking, though, on the basis of Britain's improvement of the River Thames, scientifically possible.

It would, however, be quite unfair to suggest that Canada, particularly British Columbia, is demonstrating a dog-in-the-manger attitude about its present apparently abundant supply of fresh water when it declines to share this resource with neighbors to the south.

Only in recent years has the general public come to appreciate the immense value of this water. Apart from its natural character as an essential of life, it is increasingly recognized as an essential of industrial production. Heavy industrialization in various parts of the United States, creating material wealth, has often destroyed the supply.

In British Columbia we have reached the point where warnings have been given on the pollution by industry and urban development, with its sewage problems. Through geography, we are still probably the best situated province in Canada to maintain an excellent supply. If it is exploited wisely, this could provide the ingredient of further industrial development, but only under controls that would assure fresh water in downstream flows from various plants.

If development continues, there can be no assessment at present of our needs. We are by no means bound to assist industrial competitors beyond our borders by easy access to this resource at our own eventual expense. It's our future or theirs.

Mr. Yurko has stated the case plainly. There is no indication that British Columbia's more delicate phrasing is any less explicit.

Looking into the Political Poke

Legislators in Washington are reacting with some diffidence to Mr. Ralph Nader's attempts to investigate their doings. Specifically, Nader's Raiders are zeroing in on "special interests," campaign financing, committee "secrecy" and what Mr. Nader calls Congress' abdication of power to the executive.

Already Representatives and Senators have been borne down by a 96-page 633-point questionnaire. Liberals are said to be particularly sensitive about the image their answers will project. One Congressman says: "Some of the questions are impertinent, some are meaningless and others are designed to get deceiving answers." Others excuse themselves by saying they cannot afford to take the time to answer the questionnaire and give interviews as this subtracts from time available to constituents.

By comparison, legislators in Canada are able to breathe more easily. The three-man Camp committee in Ontario investigating the role of the member at Queen's Park has more general goals and is basically sympathetic to the lawmaker. Given the history of Nader's investigative activities, the report when published is likely to be highly critical and could even result in the defeat of some members of Congress this November.

A harder-headed, less clubby look at our own parliamentarians might be in order in Canada. The Nader report on Congress could set a precedent for Canadian affairs, too.

Man's Credulity

A few days ago unidentified flying object buffs celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the modern era of UFO sightings. Flying saucers, or what became known as flying saucers, were first reported near Mt. Rainier on June 24, 1947, by a flying businessman, Mr. Kenneth Arnold of Washington State. Acting on the premise that there might, just might, be something to the observations one group after another was formed to investigate the curious phenomena. The most important of these groups is the Aerial Phenomenon Research Organization of Tucson, Ariz. One of the executives of this ambitious outfit, Mr. Richard Greenwell, says: "Although publicity has died down, interest in UFOs has not," and adds that "we still get 1,000 reports a year of UFOs, about 60 per cent of them lights, and the others sightings of disks."

Investigators are trained to spot hoaxes and to get all the facts available. Even if the saucers should prove to be spurious the Aerial Phenomenon people think their data on human behaviour will be valuable.

Whether or not the earth is being visited by extra-terrestrial creatures in spinning, colorful, blinding ships, the fact that so many people think it is so tells a tale in itself. It is a footnote to man's religious instinct: modern man may have ceased to believe but he has not ceased to want to believe.

Bumbling on Ontario's Mafia

TORONTO — Great progress has been made in the Ontario government's fight against organized crime in the province. A milestone has been passed, a watershed crossed. A minister of the government has finally admitted that the Mafia is here.

Yes, indeed. None other than the top crime fighter himself, Provincial Secretary for Justice Allan F. Lawrence. And not just in some general organized-crime-is-everywhere way, but a real the-Mafia-is-here-and-we're-trying-to-catch-it admission.

Not that Mr. Lawrence had much alternative. The Toronto Star had published a copyrighted story about the existence in Toronto of the Honoured Society of Calabria, a secret criminal organization in Italy descended from the Mafia of Sicily. Known to police as the "Siderno Group" (after Siderno Marina, the Calabria coastal village from which many of its members have emigrated to Canada), the group was reported to be actively involved in extortion, narcotics, counterfeiting, stolen securities and assorted other rackets.

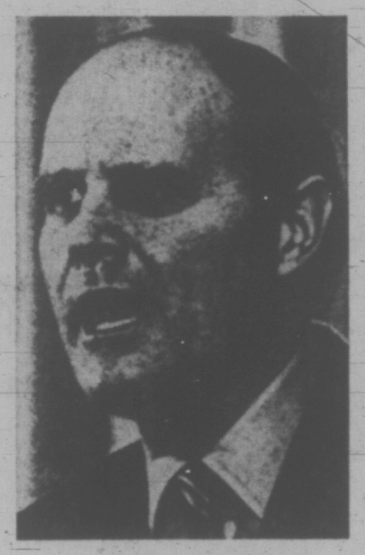
Common Knowledge

The Star article was rather shy on details but it formalized what everyone has known in Toronto for some years, that the "Our Thing" boys have found fertile ground in this city, especially in the west and northwest sections where some 350,000 Italian immigrants now live. After all, a fairly steady series of mysterious shootings, unsolved killings, bombings, arsons and witnesses who know nothing can really add up to only one conclusion.

So Mr. Lawrence had the options of denying the Star story and making himself look ridiculous, or of saying nothing (which would be almost as bad), or of admitting all. Being a sensible fellow, he of course chose the last: the Star account, he said, while incomplete appeared to be based on police intelligence reports which had been available and well known to the government "for some time."

Now this confession can hardly be gainsaid. Ever since John Wintermeyer, the then Liberal leader, made his famous 1961 speech in the Legislature on organized crime, charging amongst other things that it had worked its way into the provincial government itself, terms like "organized crime," "syndicated crime," the "Mafia" and so on have been the great unmentionables in the Ontario government's lexicon.

An inefficient Royal Commission of Inquiry and a disbelieving public helped the government to escape in 1961 but the government knew Mr. Wintermeyer was right (as ex-Premier Leslie Frost was later to admit) and the realization was a traumatic experience, producing a Pavlovian reaction, whenever the subject of organized crime comes up, that there's nobody here but us chickens.



ALLAN F. LAWRENCE
. . . without an answer

A few annual reports from the Ontario Police Commission have recognized its presence but always in general terms. The government's stance has repeatedly been that if the problem exists, it is well under control and of no great significance. The Mafia is spoken of as something that is trying to gain a foothold in Ontario but can't because of a vigilant police and government.

This of course is mischievous nonsense and Mr. Lawrence, in effect, has wisely admitted it — in spades. Not only does the "Siderno Group" exist in Toronto, he told a press conference, but other organized criminal groups are active in such fields as bankruptcy and insurance frauds, narcotics trafficking and the disposal of stolen bonds and securities.

Mr. Lawrence's object, naturally enough, was to show the government is well informed and has taken appropriate action to meet the problem. He noted, for example, that information on the Siderno Group was the result of organizing a special task force of city, provincial and federal police to concentrate on it. Similar task forces are at work on other criminal groups and specific criminal fields.

Struck Out

But information is one thing and doing something with it is another, and here Mr. Lawrence struck out abysmally. He did not know or could not say what prosecutions have succeeded in court; he could not recollect whether anybody had been deported or whether deportation proceedings had been tried. He did not know how long the Siderno Group has been in existence, although the Toronto Star report indicated it had been around for at least five years.

The difficulty, Mr. Lawrence contended, is converting police intelligence into hard evidence for the courts and the government was trying to do this by having a "co-ordinating committee on crime," consisting of corporation lawyers, tax experts and accountants work with police intelligence to develop the evidence.

Lack of Leadership

But the real difficulty, as Mr. Lawrence's press conference made only too clear, is the lack of firm, knowledgeable political leadership at the cabinet level. To a reporter's suggestion that, as provincial secretary for justice and one of the government's so-called "super ministers, he had responsibility for the anti-crime effort, Mr. Lawrence quickly replied he certainly did not; he did not even see all the police intelligence reports. Asked who then was in charge, he replied it was the responsibility of the several government departments concerned, co-ordinated of course by the co-ordinating committee.

What this comes down to is that the man most in charge is the man responsible for the police, Solicitor-General John Yaremko, the ethnic community's gift to Ontario politics. Many a tale is told of Mr. Yaremko, most of them, unfortunately, only too true. It seems impossible that a more obtuse politician has ever practised; with Mr. Yaremko around, the Mob has little to fear.

C. L. SULZBERGER

'. . . Not Without Honor . . .'

LONDON — Sometimes a nation is like its prophets who, the New Testament contends, are not without honor save in their own country. It is comforting to learn there are some people here who find moral value in the United States — and rather more, indeed, than many Americans find.

Last month Bernard Levin, a thoughtful columnist for The Times of London, developed the idea of comparative national morality in a provocative column on the recent acquittal of Angela Davis.

The brilliant Miss Davis is a proclaimed Communist as well as black and therefore (according to the President of Yale University) ineligible for justice because it is "impossible" for any Negro to get a fair trial in the U.S.A.

Levin, recalling the situation of Soviet dissidents who are neither given fair trials nor allowed to air their views in the local media, goes on: "It is no use saying to me that the standards of Russian justice are irrelevant to a consideration of the American kind.

What Tyranny Is

"In the first place, those who declare that America is a tyranny ought to be continually reminded what a tyranny actually is, with particular examples, and in the second place it is the standards of Russian justice that Miss Davis, who proudly proclaims herself a Communist, wishes to see prevail in America."

In her acquittal by a jury which disliked the quality of evidence produced, Levin sees vindication of "the truth that American justice, whatever its faults, remains genuine justice." He urges her supporters to compare the justice America meted out to her with the type she would install in a different American system.

It is appalling to hear the clamor of New Left sympathizers with Miss Davis and other protesters against evident faults in contemporary U.S. society and to compare it with the deafening silence on such subjects as the fate of Soviet dissidents recently locked up without the slightest respect for right accorded them in theory by the Soviet Constitution.

The American system has considerable tolerance for its own intolerants. The perservering determination of its judicial processes and of its press to root out injustice is too often forgotten among those who carp against the state simply because it is a state.

ANGELA DAVIS
. . . what chance in Russia

In this respect the case of Gen. Lavelle, the Air Force commander in Vietnam who exceeded his specific orders in his ardor to press the war, is interesting to examine. Lavelle should have been punished for this transgression — and, indeed, he was. Whether the punishment was adequate is doubtful. It probably wasn't, yet he did not escape scot-free. I think he should be tried by court-martial.

Nevertheless, whether the U.S. is hard enough on superhawks in uniform and whether it is hard enough on superdoves who avoid uniform is a matter of degree and also probably of emotion. The primordial fact remains that the legal system continues essentially to apply.

On the whole it is remarkable that the U.S. has been simultaneously facing a disagreeable and highly unpopular war and an overdue and much needed racial revolution without coming apart at the seams. The widespread black protest at unfair inequalities has begun to channel its energies increasingly into political expression. And, despite the strains of the Vietnam conflict which have imposed a burden on those fighting it, the armed forces remain firmly under civilian authority.

There are, of course, occasional blazing exceptions: race violence, military insubordination, cruelty and heartlessness. However, the U.S. appears to have escaped the kind of desperate solution attempted but a few years ago in France when regular officers, enraged with the French civilian attitude it held responsible for the loss of Indochina and Algeria, staged an armed insurrection against the Government.

No Armed Factions

The U.S. remains in plenty of trouble both at home and abroad. Yet I never expect to see Secretary Rogers distributing small arms to ardent Republicans in the heart of Foggy Bottom — as I saw Andre Malraux doing in the Interior Ministry's courtyard 11 years ago when civil war was feared.

And I never expect to learn that my friend and colleague Tom Wicker has been locked up and banned from disseminating his views because the administration dislikes them as much as the Kremlin detested those of Andrei Amalrik. Nor do I anticipate reading that Pyotr Yakir, after a jury trial reported in Izvestia, was freed for lack of evidence.

Back to the Stocks

Despite the obvious risk of being called a sadist, I would like to support the following—after 40-odd years as Senior Master of a Private Boys' School and six years in the Army in the Second World war.

1. Boys' Schools — corporal punishment with a cane in the proper place should be given as long as it is absolutely fair and just. I have caned many boys, two, four or six whacks — the manly, clean way and the affair is over and done with. I can recall no chip on the shoulder as a result, but rather recommendation by later boys as to the beneficial results. The criterion is FAIR and JUST. Of course there'll be exceptions.

2. That the death penalty be re-imposed for cruel and unnatural murders, raping of children, hijacking — to be decided by jury and judge. If mentally insane — then committed.

3. Much stiffer sentences for pushing of drugs, rape, etc. and the use of the lash, hard labor, with less time off for so-called good behavior or weekends off for addicts and rapists. Village stocks might be considered.

4. Why should law-abiding citizens pay for the relatively easy, permissive life of hardened criminals?

5. Keep young offenders apart from old lags and teach them a useful job. — B. G. Parker, Saanichton.

No Cause for Elation

I fail to understand Paul Hellyer's elation at blocking the baby bonus bill. All he has done is to take away a Sunday suit and a Sunday pair of shoes from every child of the poor in Canada.

Mr. Hellyer charges $10 to join Action Canada — a very expensive fee for more political pollution and sheer humbug. — John Gaul, 1276 Rudlin.

Where Were the Flags?

Here on our national holiday I sat seething mad. What's the matter with Victorians? Are they not happy they live in Canada?

I live in a complex of apartments and from here I saw one Union Jack, two Canadian flags (one is mine) and a beautiful flag pole empty. When a flag is on it, it is the British. I walked to Beacon Hill Park and saw one on the way and one in the park.

Wake up Canadians or you may some day have to fly another country's flag.— N. Bennett.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of July 11, 1912:

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — A sensational attack upon President Taft, Col. Theo. Roosevelt and the Republican and Democratic parties in general marked the beginning here yesterday of the eleventh National prohibition convention. Clinton Howard of Rochester, N.Y., temporary chairman of the convention, made a speech which bristled with denunciation of the "boss ridden, liquor controlled old parties." He declared nothing in the way of real reform was to be gained from either of them or from a third party dominated by Col. Roosevelt.

VIETNAMESE SELF-HATE

The Sick Society

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE
New York Times

SAIGON — A feeling is growing within South Vietnam's small educated elite that national morale has so collapsed that only a total revolution in the whole social structure offers hope of redemption.

Such a revolution, some of them say privately, would be possible only under a strongly authoritarian government of the type in power in Hanoi. Harsh austerity, rigid enforcement of laws and compulsion to co-operate in rebuilding are viewed as vital.

Many contend that although world interest in South Vietnamese morale centres mainly on the war, the real importance of the national mood is its effect on future reconstruction of the country.

"Sociologically, China has a lot in common with Vietnam, including traditional loyalty to family with very little interest in communities larger than that," a teacher said.

'Might Work Here'

"Before 1949," he pointed out, "the Chinese also had a mixture of wretched poverty and luxuriant corruption. Their warlords, whose power was like that of feudal princes, were something like our province chiefs.

"Now America has decided that the Chinese Communist system has worked in China, and yet they still throw up their arms in horror when it is suggested it might work here, too," he said.

The teacher, like most other South Vietnamese willing to discuss the subject, asked that care be taken not to identify him. A passing remark indicating any sympathy with Communist ideas in this country is sufficient for summary deportation to the penal colony on Conson Island.

In a series of interivews, general agreement was expressed by scores of persons considering themselves members of South Vietnam's intelligentsia that their society is desperately sick.

Human Pity Gone

"It's not simply a matter of paying the police a few hundred piastres to overlook a traffic violation, or even of the large-scale war profiteering and black-market operations," a leading Saigon journalist said. "There's corruption all over Asia and the rest of the backward world.

"With us it's much more serious. Now we have reached the stage at which human pity has mostly left us. We steal some poor soldier's watch for a few extra piastres. Our commanders drive over their own troops in their desperation to escape battles. We are ready to sell our wives to afford a television set."

"We have come to despise ourselves and our nationality," he continued, "and the more revulsion we feel, the more we excuse ourselves on grounds that you cannot survive in such a system without participating in it."

A university professor looked contemptuously from the window of his drab office at a typical Saigon traffic jam and said:

"There you see Vietnamese society in microcosm. No police or stoplights, no one to tell them what to do, so they just try to jam their way ahead, making things even worse. No pedestrian could get past that — he would be run over without hesitation."

"I have lived in London and Paris and New York," he continued, "so I know what traffic jams are in those cities. But even when they are bad, there remains a certain individual responsibility that tells drivers there that you must sometimes back up to let another car through it you ever want to move yourself. Here that never happens."

Petty Bickering

A former scholar from Hue, who said he and his family would probably be jailed or killed if the Communists come to power, said:

"We have no leaders worthy of the name at present, nor will there be any, as things stand now.

"Our childish political parties have no following and within them there is only petty bickering, never statesmanship. The public has no use for any of them, because every time some politician has shown signs of real strength, whatever government in power has always managed to buy him off."

SAIGON TRAFFIC JAM . . . No sense of responsibility

The Tory Trend Evident in B.C.

By DOUGLAS FISHER

VANCOUVER — After eight days of poking around the lower mainland of British Columbia, this visitor stands surprised by one, revealed electoral trend. Yet, it should not have been a surprise. In the early spring a thorough survey of partisan intentions within the electorate by The Province showed a remarkable upsurge in Conservative strength.

From Ottawa, over the mountains and far away, this seemed an aberration, even ridiculous. Now, on the ground, this columnist has found the Tory trend. So many voters indicated to me that they will vote Conservative, both provincially and federally, in the two pending elections.

Why did it seem an aberration? Why did so many of us take with a grain of salt the explanation that Mr. Trudeau drifted past the calling of a June election because British Columbia and Ontario prospects for the Liberals looked so shaky?

★ ★ ★

One wise-guy assumption was that marrying a Vancouver girl, the romantic honeymoon on the ski slopes, the child-begetting, the further visits to B.C., even the rumors that the Prime Minister might retire from politics to B.C. and an academic presidency and a home in Vancouver, almost made him a native son.

There was the plus factor that the Liberal MPs from B.C., in the main, have been assiduous in riding and regional duties. And the three B.C. ministers, Jack Davis, Art Laing, and Ron Basford, have tilled and fertilized the B.C. ground aggressively and in program terms. The Tories haven't a single MP from B.C., and there were no indicators that Robert Stanfield was magnetizing western voters.

★ ★ ★

The quantitative record also belied a Conservative trend. B.C. has 23 federal seats. Presently the Liberals hold 15, the NDP eight. In the '68 election the last three Tory seats disappeared. These were the remnants from the high of 18, won in '58 — the best the party ever got in the province.

Since Premier Bennett first took Social Credit into power in Victoria in 1952, it has been usual for candidates representing the four parties to contest federal elections. In 1968 the Tories ran third or fourth (doing almost as poorly as Social Credit) in 14 of the B.C. ridings, behind Liberals and New Democrats.

In the last provincial election of '69 the party fared badly, electing no one and not even fielding a full slate. Its last major federal personality, Davie Fulton, is seemingly retired from politics.

He was beaten by an unknown in the '68 federal election and that, after a disastrous episode as Tory provincial leader.

Over the past week newspa-

WARREN
. . . untainted

DAVIS
. . . disenchantment

permen and radio reporters have told me the Tories are coming back, that they'll win seats provincially and federally.

Contacts in both the NDP and the labor unions acknowledged this too, often with bafflement. Some local Liberals concede the point, though they tend to stress the provincial, rather than the federal surge.

★ ★ ★

But it has been the outsiders and non-partisans who clinch the genuineness of the Tory trend. When telescoped, their mix of feelings goes like this: A thorough distaste for Bennett, Gaglardi and Company; almost as keen as rejection of the NDP because it is pro-labor or equated with labor; a disenchantment with the Prime Minister himself; no deep regard for Basford and Davis as their voices back east; and an unwillingness to take the post McGeer, Anderson-led provincial Grits with any seriousness.

Peeping through all this negativism one gets snatches of opinion to the effect that Derril Warren, the fresh, young Tory leader, impresses them. He is untainted by the past party record. So, to a slighter degree, is Stanfield.

The federal prospects in B.C., given a likelihood of a Conservative comeback, are more heartening to the New Democrats than to the Liberals. This, simply because the core NDP vote seems more stable and slightly higher than the core Liberal vote.

No one I have spoken to intends to cast a Social Credit vote federally. This intention came even from those who avowed continuing faith in Mr. Bennett. If this should be a widespread attitude it would seem to mean, at least for the lower mainland, 10 or 11 keen, three-cornered fights. A similar pattern may apply in the other 11 ridings, although there, the general caveats are that the Social Credit loyalties are stronger and the Tories slightly weaker than in the population-thick circle in and around Vancouver.

★ ★ ★

If anything comparable to this Conservative trend in B.C. has developed in Ontario (as seems likely) then the odds to a gambling man should slightly favor a minority Liberal government in October . . . if it is to be October.

Complaining Is Not Enough

By JOHN NICHOL

VANCOUVER — Any political performer worth his salt must have a few numbers in his song book which deal with "alienation". And if he is called upon for an encore — he should also be ready with "participatory democracy".

The popular scripts say that governments and government leaders have caused the social disease called "alienation", and have failed to provide the cure — "participatory democracy".

As a political theory, this one has the advantage of being at least partly true. Politicians have certainly done their share to alienate the electorate. The sorry fact is that the people in our western democracies have consistently failed to use the power of their vote.

The younger members of our society claim to be the most dissatisfied with the lumbering, blundering performance of governments. They are the most aggressive in demanding reform of laws dealing with the environment, war and peace, family planning, and all the other gut issues.

And yet, for all this din, they are also the people who make the least use of the vote.

Louis Harris, the public opinion polster, has produced some figures on voting patterns of various age groups.

In Georgia and Kentucky 63 per cent of the over 21 group votes, but only 50 per cent of the 18-20 group.

In Britain it was found that while 72 per cent of all registered voters came out to the polls, only an estimated 61 per cent of the young people voted.

In the case of young people (in the U.S.A.) only six per cent have actively worked for a congressional candidate, compared with 12 per cent of the 50 and over age group.

Similarly, amopg the under 35 group only 18 per cent have attended a political rally or heard a candidate speak, while double that number, 36 per cent of the older group, has come out to such events.

The Harris Survey now estimates that in the last American Presidential election, barely 50 per cent of the under 30 group voted with 70 per cent of the over 50 age group.

These figures raise a question. Who is participating in these democracies, and who is not?

Some pundits felt that Nixon was being reckless in giving the vote to 18 year olds, when he was generally disliked by young people. But he knew his onions. He assumed that, in the next election, the percentage of young people who will vote will be far below that of the old folks.

Professional political managers know that active working volunteers can have a real effect on elections. A rule of thumb is that if a candidate has two per cent of the electorate actively working for him, he can win any seat. In a riding, for instance, with 50,000 voters, any candidate who can muster an active force of 1,000 people can win. It is a measure of our apathy within the system that the two per cent figure is almost never reached by any campaign committee.

Politics is a lot of work. Most people would rather bitch than fight.

Dump Truck Mentality

By DEBBIE WEBB

(A letter to the editor of The Province)

As I write this, a bulldozer is slowly shovelling out the last traces of what was once a yard of green grass, evergreens, dogwoods and an old apple tree that had seen many more years than the operator of the tractor.

We live in an older area of the city, but on a street that does not speak of the wealth of a tree-lined avenue in Kerrisdale or Shaughnessy. It is a busy street at rush hour, rather noisy, and very dusty. Street cleaners don't brush by once or twice a week here. The homeowners are regular middle class people who do what they can with their bit of property to make the area not entirely unattractive.

Several of the homes at this end of the street are on double lots, but of these by far the loveliest was the one next door. It was full of plants and trees. The elderly widow who owned the house was a stately, robust woman, full of life and vigor. She planted a garden each spring and harvested the flowers and vegetables every year.

As children we'd help her pick the baby carrots and sweet green peas. We'd snitch the sun-warm raspberries and play hide-and-seek in the trees. We wore a path in the grass playing tag round and round the apple tree.

At her guidance we watched sky-blue eggs turn into fluffy young robins and saw crocus and hyacinth push their noses through the soil. It was a world removed from the everyday city. It was always fresh and smelled of evergreens and rich, brown earth. It was her land, but she made it our special creation.

We grew up and now, from a distance, watched the seasons journey through the yard. At night in adolescent solitude I would sit at my bedroom window and watch the stars and passing clouds. I could hear the breezes pass through the trees below and always, always there was the smell of evergreens.

November storms and their branches would toss in frenzy; winter, in a silent world, they would droop with a white and heavy weight; spring and the dogwood would give birth to white blossoms and golden crowns. The years passed and the garden became a backdrop for graduation pictures and wedding portraits.

And then suddenly it was all gone. Our lady dies, the lot was divided and the pieces sold. Looking at it now, it might all have been nothing but a dream. But the tractor and a dump truck have done a good job of making it stark reality.

To you this must all seem grossly sentimental. It is, but this is not the sentiment of an old woman. I am only 20. I did not return to my old neighborhood after years had passed to be disturbed by all the change. I watched it all ripped out before me in less than an hour and a half.

I suppose this letter might be called an eulogy of sorts. But it is also a criticism of the construction industry and of its building contractors. A box will be thrown together on that lot and some young couple will spend half their life paying for it. They won't know that their little bit of property could have been quite lovely if the house had been designed around those trees.

As it is two of them, the apple tree and the dogwood, need not have been torn out at all. They were on the very edges of the lot. A few adjustments in the blueprint or position of the house and not one of those trees would have had to go.

It is too late now, though. For the next few years while I am still at home and going to school, I may look forward to sitting at my bedroom window and gazing down on an asphalt roof below. At least the builders can't obliterate the stars or clouds above — not yet, at any rate.

North Is Not An Empty Land

THE TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

In all the reports from the Arctic of increasingly frantic oil and gas exploration, there is something missing.

The North is not simply an empty land. Apart from the ecological disputes is an issue that should be of deep concern to any society that calls itself just: The matter of unresolved native land claims. Some are based on treaties and some based on aboriginal rights —that is, the concept that natives have a vested interest in the land they settled first, treaty or not.

Instead of supporting a free and thorough judicial resolution of the aboriginal claims, this government simply refuses to recognize them — a contemptible position. As for the treaty claims, the government says they will be settled in due time; meanwhile it has more pressing matters, like the Mackenzie Highway. Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien is reported to have told northern natives recently that they needn't worry because the highway will take only a tiny fraction of the contested millions of acres.

Such persuasion displays the sort of ethics one would expect from a salesman of Florida swamplands. The highway may be relatively insignificant in the area it consumes; but it is very significant, from a strictly legal point of view, in what it represents: the physical invasion of someone's property rights.

★ ★ ★

If those rights belong to the natives — and that is the open question — the government should bargain for the rights and compensate their owners. Once the highway, or a gas well or an oil pipeline, is there as fait accompli, the real bargaining power of whoever holds the invaded rights is greatly diminished.

Even if the natives do not have the rights they claim, they deserve the right to have their claims decided by an open, independent, respected tribunal before their possible property rights are mutilated.

This is a classic problem in a democracy — the need to allow majority rule while protecting minority rights. Canada's natives in the North and some other parts of the country are a tiny minority facing loss of their possible rights at the hands of the highest government in the land, and in the face of massive indifference by most of their fellow-Canadians. The Americans showed more respect for justice in the U.S. government's billion-dollar settlement of aboriginal claims of Alaska's natives.

★ ★ ★

If there is any justice in Ottawa, the government will divert this unholy haste to exploit the North into a righteous haste to resolve the disputed claims. It will provide funds so natives can hire lawyers and take their claims — aboriginal as well as treaty — to court in a few test cases. And it will raise its bargaining ethics to an honorable level. The people it is dealing with have been cheated too often already.

Wickes

The Wickes Corporation of Saginaw, Michigan, today announced the acquisition of Oregon-Pacific Industries, Inc., of Portland, Oregon, for 46,900 shares of Wickes common stock.

Oregon-Pacific Industries, Inc. wholesales lumber and plywood throughout the United States and also operates a large distribution warehouse facility in Portland.

Trimac

Trimac Limited of Calgary announces that its application to the Quebec Transportation Board for approval of Trimac's proposed acquisition of Dubuc Tank Lines Ltd., a Quebec-based company, has been refused.

The acquisition agreement, which was signed in February last, provided that the transaction was contingent upon regulatory agency approval.

Consumers

Consumers Distributing Company Limited of Toronto today called for redemption its Series A convertible debentures. The nine per cent debentures are convertible at the option of the holders into common shares at $15 per share. Redemption date is August 11. The company's only debt security, the $3 million issue was privately placed in June 1970.

CanPac

The formation of CanPac International Freight Services Limited was announced today by W. J. Stenason, vice-president administration for Canadian Pacific.

Can Pac International Freight Services is a holding company which will group under one financial and general management Canadian Pacific's activities in the warehousing, customs brokerage, international freight forwarding, ship agency, ship brokerage and terminal operating fields.

However, each company in the CanPac International Freight Services group will continue to function as an independent operating unit.

Ram Petroleum

Ram Petroleum s Limited reports it as farmed out Permit Nos. A-2765 and A-2766 constituting 72,491 acres on Axel Heiberg Island in the Canadian Arctic Islands to Forest Oil of Canada, Ltd., a wholly owned subsidiary of Forest Oil Corporation of Denver, Colorado.

Forest Oil of Canada, Ltd. has undertaken to maintain the permits in good standing until 1980 by applying work credits in the amount of $192,101.15 to the permits. Forest Oil of Canada, Ltd. may increase its interest by an additional 50 per cent by the drilling and completing of a well on each of the subject permits. Ram may convert its remaining 25 per cent working interest in any drilling tract to a 7½ per cent gross overriding royalty.

Canadian Pay Hikes Exceed Those in U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Average wages in manufacturing have been increasing faster in Canada than in the United States, and Canadian industrial workers are approaching parity, says a recent study by Canadian Industrial Relations and Personnel Development.

IRPD is a publication of CCH Canadian Ltd., a national reporting authority on tax and business law.

The publication's June wage review says the greater increases in Canada have been particularly rapid since the early 1960s.

In 1963, the average wage earner in U.S. manufacturing earned 51 cents — or 26.2 per cent — more than his Canadian counterpart.

By February, 1972, the American lead was down to 29 cents an hour and the advantage was 8.5 per cent.

Average hourly earnings in Canadian manufacturing in the first quarter of this year were 24 cents more than the first quarter of 1971 while the comparable U.S. increase was

Realtors Plan Study Sessions During Horse-Drawn City Tour

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

When the regional real estate convention opens in Victoria July 20 the chairman's first word will be "giddyup!"

The session on highrise values in Victoria will be conducted aboard three Tally-Ho horse carts.

At the microphone, instead of a tour guide, will be Victoria real estate appraisers who will discuss the value of each highrise, its land value and rents as they pass by.

On July 21, residential homes are on the agenda.

Those sessions will be conducted — you guessed it — on the top level of three double-decker tourist buses.

Again, real estate appraisers will be at the microphones to discuss housing values in various districts around the city and to answer questions.

The convention is an exchange session with real estate salesman from Portland.

At present, 48 delegates are confirmed with the possibility of as many as 100.

The idea arose when Victoria real estate salesmen attended a Portland convention in spring.

Says Eric Charman, president of the Victoria Real Estate Board:

CHARMAN
. . . on the buses

"I believe in reciprocity. If you attend a convention anywhere, try to bring them back to Victoria. That is the only way to build up business for our city.

"I told them to come to Victoria and bring their money with them. And I promised them a program that would be informative but interesting.

"In the summertime in Victoria nobody wants to sit inside a meeting room all day. I think this just might go over."

Another piece of reciprocity was confirmed today when the provincial real estate association officially declared Victoria as convention city for 1973.

More than 500 real estate salesmen from across the province are expected to attend the sessions here next May.

But will they have enough Tally-Hos?

In other real estate news, Victoria Real Estate Board manager John Hicks reported a record turnover — almost two-thirds — in sales in Greater Victoria during June.

There were 327 new listings during the month and 209 sales.

The Japanese recession continues to take a heavy toll.

The three major steelmakers all report sharply lower profits for the first six months.

Profit of Nippon Steel is down 27 per cent, Nippon Kokan down 25 per cent and Kobe Steel down 55 per cent.

The upward revaluation of the yen has also plagued Japanese exporters.

Some improvement in the Japanese economy has been noted in recent weeks but no strong upward trend is yet evident.

The slick-licker, an anti-pollution device designed in Victoria, continues to sell briskly.

Designed by RBH Cybernetics Ltd. of Victoria, the endless belt oleovators are constructed in Maple, Ontario, by Dominion Welding and Engineering Company.

An order for 22 of them worth $150,000 was placed by an Okinawa refinery owned jointly by Gulf Oil Corp. and a Japanese oil consortium.

The machinery is mounted on barges and used to combat oil spills.

The Fisheries Association of B.C. says last month's oil spill at Cherry Point was a drop in the ocean compared to what can be expected in future.

Last month 350 gallons of oil came ashore at White Rock and Crescent Beach resulting in clean-up costs of less than $50,000. (Property damage costs are still being assessed.)

The fisheries association says a federal government study has predicted a major oil spill at Cherry Point of 20,000 tons of crude oil at least once every 20 years.

Estimated clean-up costs and property damage for a spill that big . . . $30 million.

GNP to Rise 10% Study Predicts

OTTAWA (CP) — The economy should continue expanding through the balance of this year and next, a group of businessmen and economists concluded in a forum sponsored by the Conference Board in Canada.

The closed forum was held in February and a transcript of the discussion was released Monday by the board, along with a summary saying the gross national product should rise by about 10 per cent this year.

The GNP — the total value of all goods and services being produced in the country — ran at an annual rate of $98.74 billion in the first quarter of 1971, up 10.5 per cent from a year earlier.

The forum's participants expected economic expansion to continue in Canada and the U.S. although some thought there might be some slackening in the rate of increase during the second half of this year.

GNP rose last year by 5.5 per cent in the physical volume of output, combined with a general price rise of a little more than three per cent. The forum expected that physical volume of output would increase this year by six to 6.5 per cent, while prices would rise by 3.5 to four per cent.

Arthur J. R. Smith, president of the Conference Board in Canada and former chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, told the meeting that output per capita in Canada has been growing at nearly twice the rate of the real increase in goods and services produced in the U.S.

This has meant a significant narrowing of the gap between per-capita output of the two countries in the last two years, he said.

Professor Edward P. Neufeld of the University of Toronto's department of economics was confident Canada's international trade position will stabilize and come into balance by 1974 or 1975. A big international balance-of-payments surplus, established in 1970 and 1971 for the first time in nearly 20 years, is expected to go into deficit this year.

Albert T. Sommers, vice-president and director of economic research for the Conference Board of the U.S., said it is going to continue to be difficult to contain inflationary pressures. President Nixon's economic controls, easing the price and wage freeze imposed last year, may be dropped later this year, partly for political reasons before the November elections.

But there is still "a great deal of compression of inflation" in the U.S. economy. The need to restore corporation profits, which were squeezed in 1971, is going to force higher prices, he said.

Debbie Exempt from Trial! Penny Confident of Berth

Her pony-tail bobbing up and down as she ran, the blonde girl in the red warm-up suit of "Canada" was jogging around the infield at Centennial Stadium. If she was running easily, she was harboring an interesting grudge, and a personal secret.

"You are not competing?" asked an interested observer.

"No," said one of Canada's medal winners at least year's Pan American Games at Colombia, "I have too much to do in the next two weeks."

Penny May was back at the scene of many former triumphs in her own continuing story, which had its beginning at Mount Douglas Senior Secondary.

"I have the pentathlon championships at Edmonton next weekend, and then the nationals at Toronto the following week," she said. "And I have been training hard for both."

And therein lies a story and an otherwise untold fact.

For already one member of Canada's Olympic track and field team for Munich has virtually been assured of a berth.

That is Debbie Van Kiekebelt of Mississauga, who last year won the gold medal for Canada in the pentathlon at Cali, where Penny was second.

Other women's competitors in the pentathlon have been advised by letter that it is not felt necessary to being Miss Van Kiekebelt all the way back from a European trip, just to compete for a place against others on the Olympic team. Unless the others do very well indeed, Miss Kiekebelt, in effect, already has been selected.

★ ★ ★

If however, the other pentathlon hopefuls, Miss May, Diane Jones of Saskatchewan, and Jenny Meldrum of Toronto, do extremely well at Edmonton, then it is possible they will be asked to compete against Miss Van Kiekebelt in a special pentathlon test at the nationals and Olympic trials at Toronto the following week.

To which Miss May says: "No way."

"If I make the team in the pentathlon at Edmonton, I don't see why I should have to compete again when the individual events are being held at Toronto," she said.

"I want to try to make the Olympic team in some of these events, too. And I can't do that and compete in a second pentathlon trial at the same time."

Miss May, who is coming off an injury, says she is running "almost as well as I ever have, jumping better, and throwing the shot further."

"I have three coaches now, one for each event," she laughed, "and never have enjoyed track more."

Of her injury, she said she had a serious hamstring pull, and while she was off track her weight ballooned some 25 pounds.

"But I've got all of it off now," she added, "and might be just about two pounds over my weight at Cali."

Her goal is to shed a few more pounds to get down to her weight at Toronto last year when she enjoyed her finest hour.

"Last week I ran a 13.6 in the hurdles," she recalled. And if her personal all-time best is 13.5, "I'm close to that, and think I can do better. I'm hitting 5'4" in the high jump," she added, "which is about two inches better than last year, and I'm putting the shot between 42 and 43 feet in practice, and hope to hit over 45 feet in the trials.

"A previous winner of the Canadian long jump championship, she has no fear of that event, in the pentathlon and is hopeful of qualifying for the team on an individual basis in the long jump as well.

★ ★ ★

A normal day in the life of Miss May is up at 7, about an hour's drive to work, half a day instructing at a recreational camp, then out to the track for a workout of 90 minutes. In between and following there is jogging, and work with the weights, and to be certain she keeps fit, there is a diet sheet that calls for only 1,200 calories a day.

"Sure, the hamstring pains at times," she admitted. "I've had the odd shot of cortisone, and that helps; and it should be alright."

She admits that the Van Kiekebelt issue has disturbed her a bit, and also that it isn't really fair to the other girls who will be competing in Edmonton either, such as Miss Meldrum and Miss Jones. These are among the favored ones.

After all, Miss Meldrum beat Miss May at Los Alamos, New Mexico, when both qualified for the Canadian trials, Miss May has beaten Miss Van Kiekebelt, too, before they ever went to Cali.

So, it could be close, eh, with only three places open? Penny delightfully shrugged off the question.

"At Edmonton, I think I'll win," she said. "Oh, how I want to!"

The secret was out.

By The Associated Press

The rest of the nation may be into the "dry look," but as far as manager Chuck Tanner of Chicago White Sox is concerned, Gaylord Perry of Cleveland Indians still digs greasy kid stuff.

Perry burried a four-hitter Monday night for his 14th victory of the season, a 2-1 triumph over the White Sox which Tanner protested.

In other American League games, Kansas City Royals edged Baltimore Orioles 3-2, Detroit Tigers defeated Texas Rangers 8-3, Minnesota Twins blitzed Milwaukee Brewers 8-1, California Angels nipped New York Yankees 4-3 and Boston Red Sox beat Oakland Athletics 4-2.

Perry, who tied Detroit's Mickey Lolich as the winningest pitcher in the majors this season—with a little help from Mickey's cousin, Ron — has never admitted to putting anything on the baseball except spin.

At one time or another, an awful lot of batters have said Perry's pitches have more spit than spin—or some other illegal substance. Tanner insists It's grease. And he was so sure of it Monday nightt that, after 2⅓ innings, he told plate umpire Bill Haller he was playing the game under protest.

"That's Tanner's privilege to protest if he wants, and that's what I told him on the field," Haller explained. "It's a matter of judgment—and in my judgment, Perry wasn't doing anything illegal."

'Nothing But Grease Balls'

Graig Nettles' sacrifice fly gave the Indians their first run in the first inning, then Ron Lolich provided what proved to be the winner in the fourth with his first major league home run.

Tanner said Perry "threw nothing but grease balls, one after another to Dick Allen all night," and Allen, who managed only an infield hit in four at bats, more than agreed with his manager.

"I've been facing Perry for eight or nine years now," he said, "and that is all he ever throws me. Nobody ever stops him, so what can you do about it except try to hit the ball."

Rookie Texas pitcher Don Stanhouse couldn't believe what happened to him. The Tigers, en route to taking over sole possession of first place in the East, pounded him for seven of their eight runs in the first three innings.

Norm Cash belted two home runs and Jim Northrup added one for the Tigers while Don Mincher hit the 200th of his career and Hal King also had one for the Rangers.

Mike Cuellar, cruising along with a four-hitter, was just one out away from helping the Orioles to snap a four-game losing spin. But he yielded a bloop single to Richie Scheinblum, then Lou Piniella crashed his eighth home run of the year to power the Royals to victory.

Bob Darwin slammed the first grand slam of his career —his 10th homer of the season —to lead Minnesota's 12-hit assault against Milwaukee.

New Phil Boss Wins, Loses

Paul Owens replaced Frank Lucchesi as field manager of Philadelphia Phillies Monday and piloted the club to a twiligh doubleheader split against Los Angeles Dodgers, losing the first game 6-4 in 11 innings but taking the nightcap 9-1.

Elsewhere on an abbreviated National League schedule, San Fancisco Giants overtook slumping New York Mets 5-4 and Montreal Expos defeated San Diego Padres 6-3 with two Padre players winding up in the hospital. All other National League clubs had the night off.

Lucchesi had admitted at his departing news conference that he would "have to take some ofthe blame for the team's performance." Owens was quick to do the same thing when the Phillies flopped in their first game under him.

The score was tied 3-3 in the seventh when Roger Freed singled and moved up on a sacrifice. Owens sent up pinch hitter Joe Lis who singled. Plus one for the new manager. But Freed, no gazelle on the basepaths, was thrown out trying to score. Owens hadn't bothered with a pinch runner. Minus one for the manager.

"I guess I blew it," admitted Owens. "In the eighth, I'd have lifed him without hesitation."

Willie Montanez took care of the nightcap, driving in five runs with a single, triple and homer. He also scored twice. Woody Fryman tossed a six-hitter for the victory, disturbed only by Manny Mota's eighth inning homer.

The Mets dropped their fifth game in the last six, bowing to San Francisco and slipping 4½ games behind idle Pittsburgh in the East Division race.

Ken Singleton and Mike Jorgensen tagged consecutive eighth inning homers, easing Montreal past San Diego.

Kathy Ahern Tops Tourney

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kathy Ahern, who was in 49th place after the first round Friday, shot a six-under-par 67 Sunday to win the $32,000 George Washington golf classic by one stroke.

Miss Ahern, 23, winner of the Ladies' Professional Golf Association championship three weeks ago, compiled rounds of 78-68-67 for a 54-hole total of 213 over the 6,150-yard course.

Sandra Haynie, finishing with 72, was second at 214, one shot ahead of Sandra Palmer and two in front of West Germany's Gerda Boykin.

Flanked by coaches Ray Ripplemeyer (left) and Billy DeMars, Owens had hope of successful debut as Phils went ahead in eighth. However, it turned out to be sad opening as Los Angeles Dodgers tied score in ninth and grabbed 6-4 National League victory in 11th. Phils won second game 9-1.

YOU CAN'T CHANGE THE ARMY

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Owner Ppb Carpenter of Philadelphia Phillies, claiming that he couldn't fire the players, dismissed manager Frank Lucchesi Monday and named general manager Paul Owens to replace him.

"I guess it's the same in politics, war and everything else in life, you can't change the army so you change the general," said Carpenter.

He said Owens would be general manager and field manager for the rest of the 1972 season — and until the Phillies can find the man they want for the job.

Owens, 48, has never played or been a field manager in the major leagues. He was a minor league player, manager, scout and farm director before being named general manager of the National League club last June 3. He took over the team with the worst record in baseball.

Lucchesi, 45, was demoted to a special assignment representative for the club.

'Power-Packed' Warriors Test Rocks on Wednesday

Brantford Warriors will be carrying some heavy credentials into Memorial Arena Wednesday night as the classy Easterners continue their tour through the Western Lacrosse Association with an 8:30 engagement against Victoria Shamrocks.

For starters, they are the same Warriors that swept New Westminster Salmonbellies four straight games to win the Mann Cup last year;

—Are the current leaders of the Eastern Division of the National Lacrosse Association;

—Hold three of the top four scorers in Eastern Canada;

—Are led by Gaylord Powless, one of the games true superstars;

—Have an offensive-minded goalkeeper, Bob McCready, who already has scored a goal this season.

The Warriors are the first Eastern team to make the swing West this year on four-game tours that count in the league standings in both the Western and Eastern Division of the NLA.

Brantford, who open the tour tonight at the Pacific Coliseum in Vancouver against the Burrards, are enjoying a fast start but their suspended coach still has some reservations about his club.

"We haven't really hit our peak yet this season," said Morley Wells, suspended recently for using two ineligible players.

Powless, who was the driving force for years on the floor as Jim Bishop built a junior dynasty for the Oshawa Green Gaels, had amassed 98 points in 20 games to lead the East in scoring.

The slick centre now enjoying his fourth year of success in senior play is one of a batch of high scorers on Brantford who have averaged more than 17 goals a game this season.

Forward Brian Wilson had piled up 85 points as of last week, and defenceman Paul Suggatt, who has 84 points occupy third and fourth place in the league scoring.

Powless, had 42 goals and combined with Wilson, Suggatt and veteran Ron McNeil, who had 36 goals in his first 14 games, to give the Warriors four players with a total of 151 goals this season.

Richmond Rally Topples Surrey

SURREY (CP) — Third-place Richmond Roadrunners came from behind Monday to defeat Surrey Salmonbellies 10-9 in Pacific Junior A Lacrosse League action.

Victory moved Richmond to within two points of second-place Burnaby and dropped Surrey deeper into the league basement.

Surrey led 4-3 at the end of the first period and 7-5 after 40 minutes. Dave Durante scored four goals to lead the Richmond attack.

For Surrey, Don Brown and Chuck Medhurst each scored three goals.

Anxious Arnie Keeps Trying 'To Make Something Happen'

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — "I keep on trying to make something happen — but it just doesn't."

Arnold Palmer, perhaps the most popular player golf has ever known and the man generally acknowledged to be the driving force behind the enormous growth of the game, was talking about his failure to win this season.

"I've had a chance to win three times, real good chances," Palmer said, a slight, puzzled frown creasing one of the world's most-photographed faces.

"But every time I got in position to win, every time I thought I had something going, something always happened. I think I just wanted to win too much and got too anxious.

The 42-year-old master who put the word "charge" in golf's lexicon was making one of his fabled runs at the leaders in the final round of the Bob Hope Desert Classic — then hit one out of bounds.

Again, at Dallas in the Byron Nelson Classic, he mounted a last round challenge.

His always huge gallery swelled to massive proportions as the faithful stampeded to his side to witness another miracle.

Instead they viewed consecutive three-putt bogeys that killed it all.

"Each time," he recalled, "I was trying to make birdie and ran the first putt too far beyond the hole."

At Greensboro, he held a two-stroke lead going to the par-three 16th hole on the final day. He hit into a shallow stream at the bottom of a ditch, elected to play it out and took a lead-destrying, confidence-shattering triple bogey six that cost him the title.

LOSES CONCENTRATION

"I've had trouble with my concentration," he mused before a practice round for the British Open, which begins Wednesday. "My mind wanders. All of a sudden I'm not there. I'm off in a cloud or something somewhere else."

He's had other troubles, too. With his putter, with his irons, even with his driver, usually the most reliable club in his bag.

And there's his eyes. He's experimented with eye-glasses and contact lenses to correct a near-sighted condition. He recently abandoned them.

"I think I'm better off without them," said Palmer.

But even with the glasses, and advancing years, and increasing girth, and greying, thinning hair, and the lack of victories, Palmer still exerts a magic effect on galleries all over the world.

And he ranks, at worst, as a sentimental choice to sidetrack Jack Nichlaus in his drive for golf's Grand Slam in this ancient tournament, the third of four events that make up that never-accomplished sweep.

He's listed at a 20-1 choice by Britain's legal bookies.

And, although he admitted at the United States Open: "I sometimes think I may never win another major title only because you guys (reporters) keep talking about it," the flame of desire and competition burns as brightly as ever.

Record Contract For Jump to Pros

TORONTO (UPI) — Sgt. William Harris, a 35-year veteran of the Metropolitan Toronto police force, chose Monday to hand in his resignation.

At about the same time his son, Bill, 21, a brilliant right-winger last season with the Toronto Marlboro junior hockey team, signed a two-year contract with the New York Islanders of the National Hockey League for $250,000 the most money an amateur hockey player has ever received for jumping straight into the professional big league.

It was estimated that Bill Harris' earnings as a hockey player in the next two years will equal what his father has made serving the public in the last 35 years.

Sgt. Harris said this did not bother him. His only regret is that Bill will not be playing for the University of Toronto Blues hockey teaf.

He said Bill was a good student but when it became apparent several years ago that Bill would do "quite well" in professional hockey, "we didn't discourage him.

Young Harris scored 57 goals and assisted on 72 other last season.

Little Leaguers Battle Tonight

If the rain holds off, eight baseball teams will begin chasing Little League area titles tonight.

Opening games in the four three-team, double-loss elimination tournaments are scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m. at Lampson Street Park, Allenby Park, Hillside Park and Hollywood Park.

Cheryl Wins Three Events In Alberta Championships

CALGARY — Cheryl Blevins of Victoria won three events here at the weekend to top a Vancouver Island contingent of approximately 50 athletes at the Alberta midget-bantam track and field championships.

The 15-year-old runner from the Victoria Mercuries Track Club was the Island's only three-time winner, collecting firsts in the midget girls' 100, 200 and 400 metres.

Wendy Davies of the Victoria Flying "Y" and Joanne Calverley of Nanaimo each collected two victories.

Miss Davies took first place in the bantam girls' 80-metre hurdles and 200-metre sprint and placed second in the 100 metres. Miss Calverley won the shot put and discus events in the midget girls' class.

Other Island winners and runners-up in the bantam class were: Ian Sutherland of the Victoria Track Club (1st javelin, 2nd discus), Sue Hutchinson of Mercuries (first in 400 metres), Ulla Hansen of Mercuries (first in 800 metres, second in 1,500 metres), Tim Watts of Flying "Y" (second in triple jump) and Jim Bissenden of VTC (second in long jump).

Gordie Evans (second in 1,500 and 3,000 metres), Gail Gummer (first in high jump, second in 80-metre hurdles) and Alix Bawlf (second in long jump), all of VTC, dominated the midget class.

In the relays, Mercuries' bantam girls won the 4x100 while bantam boys' teams from the Flying "Y" took seconds in the 4x100 and sprint medley.

Flood of Senior Entries Surprises Golf Governors

Canada's golfing seniors invade Uplands in two weeks' time, and it's a cinch that those with executive leanings will have different expressions on their faces when they study Harry Young.

The queer look is out, respect is in.

When the Royal Canadian Golf Association governors first began to look at Uplands as the site of the 1972 national seniors' tournament, Harry promptly pressed for some entry restrictions. Otherwise, he warned, the national committee will be besieged with entries.

"They laughed at me," said the Victoria executive at a pre-tournament gathering the other day.

The last laugh is on the national know-it-alls.

A "quarter of a thousand" entries is what Harry promised, and that was just about the total in the barrel when the entry deadline was reached Monday.

Precisely, the figure is 247.

The RCGA hasn't experienced such a flow of entries since it first put its stamp on a national seniors' tournament some 11 years ago.

The record flow has forced, after considerable pressure from Victoria, a historic first. Hitherto, all RCGA tournaments were run off in threesomes. Competitors in the 1972 seniors' tournament will be sent off in foursomes.

The RCGA, again bowing to pressure from Young and his B.C. pals, also has decided to stretch the entry limit — from 168 to 184. Unfortunately, that means the Uplands committee still will have to say "sorry, no . . ." to the seniors who have been cut out.

It figures that the RCGA would get around to bowing to Young's requests. They didn't believe the Laird of Ranfurly the first time. Now, they believe . . .

★ ★ ★

B.C.'s 1972 Willingdon Cup team should be known by this time next week, and Dave Mick suggested he may make it for a second straight year. The hint was dropped in Comox, where Mick won the North Island title.

Now spreading his allegiance between Gorge Vale and Cowichan, Mick holds down fourth place heading into this weekend's two invitational rounds on the mainland. B.C. Amateur champion Doug Roxburgh, Johnny Russell and Harry White have grips on other berths based on their scoring in the recent B.C. Amateur at Royal Colwood.

This could be Mick's final chance to represent B.C. in the interprovincial tournament for a few years. He has been accepted into dentistry at UBC and that means he will have to shun golf for at least two years.

Incidentally, the tournament recorders at Comox neglected Al Brown of Uplands. Brown and Jim Marasco of Port Alberni both scored three-over-par 143s to finish a stroke behind Mick.

They gave the Uplands player the low net prize and singled out Marasco as the second-place finisher.

Stamps, Riders Still Rate As Teams to Beat in West

By The Canadian Press

New faces, new stars and — in some cases — old disappointments, will be the name of the game in the Western Football Conference this season.

In any case, with training camp behind them and the pre-season schedule opening up, the annual game of follow-the-leader is under way.

Calgary Stampeders, Grey Cup champions and conquerers of the Canadian Football League All-Stars, and Saskatchewan Roughriders will probably make the fewest changes. They finished 1-2 in the WFC last year and have almost pat lineups.

For Winnipeg, Edmonton and British Columbia, it will be a year of trying to catch Calgary and Saskatchewan. And the coaches know it will be tough.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers must tighten their defence; Edmonton Eskimos must boost their offence; B.C. Lions—once feared for their savage "head hunters"—must come up with a tighter defence and some consistent quarterbacking.

But the leaders can't stand still.

Calgary, which lives by the pass and a rock-like defence, needs offensive backs for depth; Saskatchewan has defensive backs on top of the priority list.

In B.C. and Edmonton, where losing years may endanger the jobs of head coaches Eagle Keys and Ray Jauch, the performance of newcomers will be critical.

The Lions spent lavishly during the winter and a losing season might be Keys' swan song, even though his contract would not be up.

With the action starting in earnest, here's how the WFC shapes up:

Stamps Need Offensive Backs

Calgary Stampeders (9-6-1 last year)—The best and stingiest defence in Canada last year, giving up fewer than two touchdowns a game. John Helton; Fred James, Dick Suderman and Craig Koinzan are as solid as any front four in the league. Middle-linebacker Wayne Harris — Canada's lineman of the year for four years — is flanked by Joe Forzani, Dave Crabbe and Jim Furlong. And Calgary is strong in the secondary with Howard Starks, Larry Robinson, Bill Van Burkleo, Terry Wilson and Frank Andruski. It should be as tough for a rookie to break in as it is for opposing backfielders to break through. Herm Harrison is as fine a tight end as there is. At wide receiver, the Stamps are knee-deep with speedy Jon Henderson, Gerry Snow, Jon Senst and rookie Gary Kerr.

Riders Have Problem on Defence

Saskatchewan Roughriders (9-6-1)—The big green machine finished strongly, last season, tying Calgary on points with 19, but taking second place because the Stamps beat them twice. Ron Lancaster continues to give them solid quarterbacking and his backup men — Bubba Wyche and Bob Pearce — also can play halfback both ways. George Reed and Bobby Thompson will be tough again as running backs, but there's one position open because of the trade that sent Silas Mc-Kinnie to Hamilton Tiger-Cats. Steve Molnar has done the job capably in the past, but Ole Gunderson, who made Associated Press little All-America last year, showed well in camp. Jack Abendschan and Gary Brandt are set at guard, with Clyde Brock one tackle —the other spot still open because of an off-season hernia operation to Ralph Galloway. Gord Barwell, flanker; Nolan Bailey, tight end Aldford split—no problems there. Things are not so set in the defensive secondary.

Eskimos Present Solid Nucleus

Edmonton Eskimos (6-10)—They had the second-best defensive record in the West last year, but finished dead last because of a poor offence. However, after coach Ray Jauch cleaned house late in the season, the Esks won their last five games. Bruce Lemmerman performed consistently at quarterback, but Rank Harris, an import, and Dave Syme, a Canadian, looked good in camp. Running backs Sam Scarber and Gene Foster came to Edmonton late last year and the team began to win. Calvin Harrell from Arkansas State, drafted seventh by Miami Dolphins of the National League, is aboard and Jauch says "he'd have gone in the first or second round" had he not hurt his knee in the Senior Bowl. "We think he could be the best back in Canada." Roy Bell who scored nine touchdowns and had a 7.2-yard average with Oklahoma Sooners last year, should make it. The offensive line allowed the opposition to get to Lemerman only twice in six games last year and all but one the retired Allen Ische— will be back.

Bombers Should Run Up Points

Winnipeg Blue Bombers (7-8-1)—Don Jonas was Canada's outstanding payer last year, quarterbacking the most explosive offence in the country. Winnipeg made the WFC playoffs by outscoring its opponents, but had problems keeping the opponents from scoring. Off-season activity has been concentrated on defence. Jim Heighton and Joe Critchlow have it made on the line, but there still are a couple of spots open. Dave Chaney, all-America from San Jose, is fighting Mickey Doyle for middle-linebacker and if Doyle makes it, Chaney may move to the outside. Grady Cavness from El Paso may force coach Jim Spavital to move Paul Brule from safety to corner. Then there's Paul Williams, valuable on defence and offence, to the point where Spavital is uncrtain where to put him. If Williams stays on defence, Bob Kraemer must make it at wingback — otherwise the 1971 rookie of the year could miss a starting spot. Chuck Liebrock should strengthen the offensive line at guard.

Lions Deep in Backfield Talent

British Columbia (8-8-1)—Coach Eagle Keys is sticking with quarterback Don Moorhead, but he's taking a long look at Don Bunce, who quarterbacked Stanford to a Rose Bowl victory. And he still has Tom Wilkinson, veteran from Toronto Argonauts and what has become of Eric Guthrie, impressive young Canadian who played at Boise State? Whoever handles the team, he'll have power and speed in the backfield and at the ends. All-America fullback Johnny Musso from Alabama will team with Jim Evenson, who gained 1,237 yards last year. Slotback Jim Young and speedy Larry Highbaugh will be prime receivers. The problem should not be to score, but to keep from being scored upon. The down linemen look strong with Greg Findlay and Gary Robinson apparently set at ends and with all-America Ron Estay and Garrett Hunsberger inside. Carl Weathers pivots the line-backers, flanked by Ray Nettles, another star from Tennessee and either Peter Palmer or George Anderson. The defensive backfield is the problem —has Keys missed the boat by going primarily with the crew that earned the nickname "the Kiddy Korps" last year?

MARILYN PALMER SETS PACE FOR QUALIFIERS

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver, B.C., led the women's division after the first round of qualifying play Monday in the Pacific Northwest Golf Association championships.

Marilyn had a three-under-par 71, two strokes better than second-place Dale Shaw of Victoria.

Dick Price of Longview, Wash., fired a seven-under-par 65 for a two-stroke lead in the men's division.

Price shot nines of 31-34 against par of 36-36. He was over the course's competitive record by only one stroke after missing a five foot birdie putt at the final hole.

Jerry Dundari was in second place with a 67.

Slick Putting Boosts Conrad to Second Spot

VANCOUVER — Steve Berry of Marine Drive fired a two-under-par 70 Monday morning and carried a 76 in the afternoon to take a one-stroke lead at the halfway mark in the 72-hole British Columbia Golf Association junior championship at Point Grey Golf Club.

Trailing Berry with 147 after 36 holes is Dunc Conrad of Victoria Golf Club, who vaulted into the second spot with a one-under 71 in an afternoon downpour after shooting a 76 in the opening round.

Tied for third, four strokes back of Berry, are Bob Beauchemin of Gorge Vale, the Victoria junior champion, and Drew Wintemute of Victoria.

MID-RIFF
We're the first to say that certain gals look great with a bare midriff at certain times. But for a big man, or a tall man, the sudden appearance of his own bare midriff, or even a partial one, is most disconcerting if it is caused by a shirt that won't stay tucked in . . . or is too short in the first place.
The big men and tall men who shop at a Mr. Big 'n Tall shop feel smugly superior when they see this happen to someone. Because the shirts they buy from us are styled to overcome the problem.
A complete, head-to-toe wardrobe of forward fashions and accessories for big and tall men. Come in and browse. No pressure, ever. Your Chargex is welcome.

While the portability of the Zodiac is a great asset, the main feature is their extreme safety. Zodiacs have crossed the Atlantic and make regular trips across the Mediterranean and the English Channel. They are now well-known in Canada as the boat used by Commander Jacques Cousteau in the television series. Made famous by commandos during the war, they are virtually unsinkable, and almost impossible to capsize.
While inflatable boats are relatively new in Canada, they have been available in Europe since the 30s, where they account for 30% of the market for boats under 20 feet in length.
Zodiacs are made of seven-ply nylon with a DuPont "Hypalon" coating and are unaffected by temperature changes, sunlight, oil, fuel, etc. Given average care, Zodiacs will last indefinitely.
Societe Zodiac is the world's leading manufacturer of these amazing craft.

GARDENING

Wallflowers, Stock Need Pricking Out

Gardeners who sowed seeds in early June of biennial wallflowers, Brompton stock, forgetmenots and Canterbury-bells will now have seedlings with four or six leaves.

Since they are either in flats outdoors or in "nursery" rows they will be sturdy and lack the annoying spindling too common among amateur's seedlings.

While still small, preferably with no more than four leaves, prick out (move) enough seedlings of each kind for your planting needs. The new space will be the "growing" rows, so give them about five inches between seedlings all ways.

The soil will need four inches of humus, but no peatmoss, since wallflowers and stocks belong in the vast Crucifer, or Cabbage, Family all of which may develop diseases in acid soil. Dust a little lime along the rows so that it goes down around the seedling roots as you plant.

★ ★ ★

Make each seedling reasonably firm; then water as you finish putting in each dozen seedlings.

If you have mixed colors of wallflowers or stocks or Canterbury-bells, select seedlings of all sizes — not only the largest. Using this method, you have a chance of getting a mixed planting in bloom. Foliage differences can be detected at seeding stage as your experience increases from observation.

By the first week of September while your gardening enthusiasm is still high, these biennial plants must be moved to the beds or borders where you want them to flower next spring.

Left until later September or even November as many gardeners do, these growing young plants fail to become re-established before winter. They fail to produce the expected results in color and haunting fragrance, so biennials are written off as failures.

★ ★ ★

This is the perfect climate for biennials, for our usual mild winters with short periods of frost are to their liking. Even though covered with snow for a while, the plants survive to make flower buds in late March and April.

If these plants develop woody stems they have less chance of survival, which is the reason we emphasize the early pricking out of seedlings, the good culture in summer and the early September final planting.

With a complete root system in each shovel of soil as you make that final planting, your biennials will never know they have been moved. Spring bulbs can be put into the spades between and you have a pleasant prospect all winter for encouragement. The glory of fulfillment comes in spring.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

As all bridge players know through bitter experiences, there are days when one gets to an obviously hopeless contract. In these circumstances, the experienced player has learned how to "create" the only set-up, the then proceeds to play on the assumption that his creation is reality. Today's deal illustrates this point.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♡ K Q 7
◇ 9 5

WEST
♠ K 10 8
♡ J 10 9 5
◇ Q 10 6
♣ J 9 2

EAST
♠ J 9 5
♡ A 3
◇ J 8 7 2

SOUTH
♠ 7 3
♡ 8 6 4 2
◇ A K 4 3
♣ A K 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

Actually, South should have passed North's invitational rebid of two notrump. Although a point in excess of the 13 required for a minumum opening bid, South really did have a minimum hand, with eight of his cards being a seven-spot of lower. From South's position, if North couldn't bid three notrump over one notrump, then three notrump didn't figure to be makable.

West's jack-of-hearts opening lead was covered by dummy's queen, and taken by East's ace. East returned a heart, West's nine being captured by the board's king. As is rather apparent, declarer didn't care for his position, the reason for his dislike being an insufficiency of tricks.

As declarer correctly appraised his position, the only chance he had to fulfill the contract was to bring home four spade tricks. For this to be accomplished, a couple of favorable things had to exist. First, the six adversely-held spades had to be divided 3-3; and, of equal necessity, West had to possess, specifically, the tripleton K-x-x of spades. In a word, to make the required four spade tricks, declarer had to be lucky.

At trick three, declarer led the deuce of spades out of the dummy, and put up the seven-spot after East had followed suit with the five. Upon capturing this trick with his eight, West then cashed two heart tricks. He then exited with a club, East's queen falling to South's king.

Declarer now led his remaining spade and inserted dummy's queen when West followed suit with the ten. He breathed a sigh of relief when the queen won the trick (had East possessed the king, dummy's ace of spades would have been uncashable).

Dummy's ace of spades was cashed next, East's jack and West's king falling on this trick. Declarer was no whome with his contract, since dummy's two remaining spades were winners.

LONE SAILOR SINKS IN OCEAN OF LOVE

FALMOUTH, England — A lone sailor who crossed oceans in search of love was lonelier still Monday. The pretty young typist he sailed 19,000 miles to marry told him his long voyage has been in vain.

Three months after they met at a dance in Melbourne, Australia, tall, good-looking carpenter Graeme Tait, 36, popped the question. For him it had been love at first sight, but the typist, attractive, fair-haired 25-year-old Barbara Hill, wasn't so sure.

When she had to fly home to England in the spring of 1970 she still had not given him her answer.

Tait decided to follow her half way across the world in his 34-foot homemade ketch, Maola.

At each port of call Tait cabled Miss Hill his love, but the voyage ended in heartbreak for the Australian.

In a waterside cafe at Falmouth on Monday, less than two days after he stepped ashore, Miss Hill gave Tait her answer. It was no.

Schumann Heads Home

PEKING (Reuter) — French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann left today for home after a five-day visit to Peking culminating in a meeting late Monday night with Chinese leader Mao Tse-tung.

Schumann, whose visit has produced increased Sino-French cultural, medical and scientific contacts, said before departure his meeting with Mao was cordial.

LOST: One Winning Sweepstakes Ticket

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. — William Armstrong of Badger, Nfld., goes right on searching, as does his wife and family, for a lost Irish Sweepstakes ticket worth $120,000.

Mrs. Ellen Armstrong, tired and dispirited, said Monday they have had no luck, after looking in every nook and cranny for the little piece of paper with the number LKA 79428 which could bring the Armstrongs a fortune they never dreamed of.

"The only place left is the attic," she said.

The ticket carried Armstrong's name, home town and nom de plume.

Armstrong, 61, can't recall who sold him the ticket, and the seller hasn't come forward. He says he never received a receipt and in addition ticket sellers usually keep a record of their sales stubs since they are eligible for cash prizes in the case of a winner.

Armstrong said he expects sweepstakes officials will be in touch with the family this week, but he doesn't know whether a ticket is required to claim the prize.

VANCOUVER — The Province Sunday announced the appointment of Robert McConnell as editor, effective July 17, replacing Paddy Sherman, who became publisher July 1 on the retirement of Fred S. Auger.

McConnell, 29, graduated from the University of British Columbia in 1964.

Since 1970 he has lived in Victoria, writing on political affairs.

LONDON — London Zoo came to the rescue of a Canadian Cree Indian woman who wants to be suitabley attired for her first Buckingham Palace garden party.

Elsie Wuttunee-Bourgaize, who was raised on the Red Pheasant reserve near Saskatoon, said she planned to wear her native dress but could not find the eagle feather essential for her headband. Searching frantically, she finally called London Zoo in desperation, pleading for help since she was to attend the party today.

The zoo responded, not with an eagle tail feather which she wanted, but with a wing feather which she said will have to do.

Mrs. Wuttunee-Bourgaize has been spending 40 weeks in Britain lecturing on the Canadian Indians.

WASHINGTON — Arthur Bremer accused of shooting Alabama Gov. George Wallace, has been refusing since July 3 to co-operate with psychiatrists trying to examine him at the Clifton T. Perkins State Hospital in Jessup, MD.

Dr. John Hamilton, the hospital's director, wrote in a July 7 letter to Prince George's Country Circuit Judge Ralph Powers that in view of Bremer's refusal to discuss anything with psychiatrists, "I can see no valid reason for continuing the examination of Bremer as ordered by the court."

The letter came to light in Bremer's court file in Upper Marlboro, MD., Monday after Judge Powers delayed Bremer's trial on state charges, which was to have begun Wednesday, until July 31.

MADRID — Pepe, like many other residents of Almunecar in Southern Spain drinks and smokes. The difference is that Pepe is a rooster.

Pepe lives in a bar, has a little beer in the morning, then stays off the booze till eveing when he drinks as much wine as customers care to offer.

He has also been smoking for a while now. A lighted cigarette is put in his beak and he keeps it there, breathing out smoke until it is finished.

'Trick' in Lod Confession

LOD, Israel (AP) — An Israeli general testified today that he tricked Japanese terrorist Kozo Okamoto into confessing his part in the Tel Aviv airport massacre by promising him "my revolver and one bullet" to commit suicide.

Maj.-Gen. Rehevam Zeevi, chief of Israel's central army command, was asked if he meant to keep his agreement with Okamoto.

"God forbid, it was only bait," the general replied.

Zeevi testified on the second day of Okamoto's military trial for the machine-gun and grenade attack by himself and two other Japanese working for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. Twenty-eight persons including the other two Japanese were killed, and 67 were wounded.

The chief defence lawyer, Max Kritzman, brought Zeevi into the case to prove his contention that the confession had bee made under duress.

The general said he and the 24-year-old Japanese signed a written contract in which Okamoto promised to give all information "honestly and in full," and Zeevi promised that when the interrogation was ended, he would give Okamoto a gun "for his own use."

HIJACK BID FOILED

MUNICH (AP) — Police overpowered an Algerian-born Frenchman aboard a Lufthansa 727 jetliner Monday night after he threatened to blow up the plane unless he was given $400,000 and a parachute, the airlines reported today.

Authorities said Arlanda Bachali, 26, sent an extortion note written in French and Italian to the pilot of a Lufthansa airliner en route from Cologne to Munich with 53 passengers aboard.

Bachali, described as being intoxicated, claimed he carried a bag of bombs to blow up the plane unless he was given the money and a parachute with instructions in Italian and French.

When the plane landed in Munich, pilot Peter Held, 33, talked Bachali into releasing half the 53 passengers.

As the passengers filed out, three plainclothes policemen slipped into the plane and grabbed Bachali, who offered no resistance, authorities said.

Faceless Drummer Potent Theatre

By VICTOR STANTON

LENNOXVILLE, Que. (CP) — Festival Lennoxville's production of George Ryga's Captives of the Faceless Drummer may not draw the average theatre-goer, but it is a show for the theatre enthusiast.

This may not augur well for the box office of the newly launched festival of Canadian theatre, but it speaks highly of the festival's ambitions and the strengths of its company.

Probably fewer than half the 600 seats were filled in the Centennial Theatre, which Bishop's University has donated to the festival. But the Ryga play, which opened Monday night as the second production of the festival's inaugural six-week season, offered a rare theatrical experience.

The two leading actors were so well matched that the opposing characters they played demanded equal sympathy, equal understanding and equal forgiveness.

Roger Blay, as the captor, and Donald Davis, the captive, also succeeded in rendering the powerful, poetic language of the playwright on a realistic emotional level.

Director William Davis, the festival's artistic director, and designer Michael Eagan made effective use of flame-red carpeting and back-drop curtains surrounding the giant grey door and black and white floor of the captive's cell.

But dressing the chorus members in matching red, translucent, body-tight garments suggestive of uniforms made them more part of the set than of the play itself.

The play has been a source of controversy since it was written in late 1970 as a commissioned work for the Vancouver Playhouse and then rejected by the Playhouse board of directors.

Set in an unidentified Canadian city of the future, it parallels to some degree the political situation in Quebec during the 1970 kidnapping crisis.

A group of west-coast actors gave it its premiere performance at the Vancouver Art Gallery. Last season Toronto's St. Lawrence Centre mounted a production in the small Town-Hall theatre, adding to the controversy by having cast members hand out copies of the FLQ manifesto.

THEY'LL PEDAL TO CHINA

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — With luck, and a lot of pedalling, Bruce Preston and his wife Joyce will be in China next April.

The Prestons leave London in mid-August and plan to pedal through 15 countries to Hong Kong on 10-speed bicycles.

Preston, a 33-year-old lawyer in Prince George said Monday he and his wife have been planning the trip for six months. He said they caught the bicycling bug three years ago in Europe and have been cycling ever since.

The first hop is to Toronto by train at the end of July. From there they will stop off in Ottawa to try for entry papers into China from the Chinese embassy before flying to London.

The pedalling begins in earnest when they land in France. From there it's on to Switzerland, Italy, Greece, through the Middle East to India, a plane to Bangkok and then down the Malay Peninsula to Singapore. From there they fly to Hong Kong and hope to enter China before catching a plane home.

Preston said their biggest problem, aside from limited tourist facilities in some countries, will be the clothing for his wife.

"Some of the mid-east countries aren't used to women doing this sort of thing," he said. "They have some ideas on a woman's role and I don't know what Joyce may have to wear to get across."

Davis Urges Ocean Zones

VANCOUVER (CP) — Oceans and coastal areas of the world should be zoned for various types of traffic and use, Environment Minister Jack Davis told the 13th International Conference on Coastal Engineering Monday.

Just as cities are zoned, so should the ocean be divided for different uses with the aim of preserving "precious, sensitive ecological areas."

Davis said the whole question of zoning and establishing water quality management and standards along Canada's coastline will be discussed at a conference in Washington, D.C., Thursday.

"We will discuss the problem of water quality, and I hope, end up with an agreement similar to the one we now have between Canada and the U.S. on the Great Lakes," he said. Discussions will include the recent Cherry Point, Wash., oil spill which damaged B.C. beaches in June.

Davis said his deputy, Al Davidson, will head a party of six to open talks in Washington Wednesday. Davis will attend Thursday with Russell Train, chairman of the U.S. Council on Environmental Quality.

He said he hopes the Great Lakes concepts can be extended to cover the Strait of Georgia and Puget Sound, areas he labelled "inland seas" where the water is flushed out about once a year.

"They have the richest underwater biological stocks that the world knows of," he said.

FALCON RESCUED by a Montreal man after the bird made an early unsuccessful flight attempt, is destined to become one of the feature attractions for Montreal's zoo at the Garden of Wonders in Lafontaine Park.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A young housewife was given more than two years to pay a $250 fine for possession of hashish when she appeared in provincial court Monday.

Judge William Ostler had already imposed the fine when he was told by Susan Jane Masters, 18, that she was working for $220 a month to support her husband and two small children.

Ostler ordered the fine paid at the rate of $10 per month.

The woman was being taken to police headquarters May 8 for a personal search by a matron after a search of her house at 1426 Stanley.

In the cruiser enroute to the station, Mrs. Masters produced a matchbox containing hashish from the front of her blouse and told the officers, "Here it is."

She told Ostler she had taken a job because the family preferred to struggle along on their own income — however small — rather than stay on welfare.

Before ordering the 25-month payment plan, Ostler noted that the woman had an "unusual and refreshing attitude."

★ ★ ★

"You're pretty badly hooked," Ostler told a heroin addict convicted of shoplifting, "to the point where it prevents your doing anything constructive with your life."

But the judge decided Richard Douglas Booth, 20, of Vancouver, was "entitled to one chance" and gave him a suspended sentence and one year's probation on the theft charge.

Booth stole a $3.98 air horn from The Bay, 1701 Douglas, June 15.

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson had suggested that the accused's pre-sentence report "didn't hold out much hope that anything but a short-sharp shock" would help the accused mend his ways.

★ ★ ★

Richard Michael Alexander, 17, of Langford, charged in connection with the pollution of Thetis Lake on the night of June 17, was remanded for appearance on Aug. 25.

Alexander is charged with breaking and entering a construction shack at the lake, and "fouling" the recreation spot with two gallons of crude liquid coal tar taken from the shack.

He elected trial by county court judge on the break-in charge, and pleaded not guilty to charges of mischief, common assault and violating a city bylaw against water contamination.

The assault charge involves an earlier incident June 9 in Colwood.

★ ★ ★

Gary McCully Beck, 17, of 128 Montreal, was given a suspended sentence and placed on probation for one year for breaking, entering and theft.

Beck broke into a Colwood bakery May 5 and stole cookies and other pastries "because I was hungry." He later turned himself in to police.

★ ★ ★

Edward Dennis, 23, of 735 Roderick, was fined $250 or ordered to spend one month in jail for possession of marijuana.

★ ★ ★

Donald B. Gillis, 1761 Haultain, was fined $50 on a charge of obtaining food worth $9.55 by false pretences from a restaurant on Douglas July 9.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, Judge E. F. N. Robinson fined two men $350 each for impaired driving.

They were Joseph Denluck, 41, of 1695 Sheridan, stopped in Victoria July 7, and Alfred Morgan, 63, of 1820 Lillian, stopped by city police July 8.

★ ★ ★

Robert Beaton, 51, of 829 Condor, was fined $400 for driving while impaired March 19 in Victoria.

Towboat Men Start Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations opened Monday for a new contract in the towboat industry to replace the one that expires Sept. 30.

Towboat Industrial Relations Association, in its first year of operation representing the owners, met with the Canadian Merchant Service Guild and exchanged proposals. A spokesman said over 100 contract items are up for discussion but no details were given.

Wednesday and Thursday, TIRA will meet with the Seafarers International Union and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers Union.

About 1,600 workers are involved.

Drinks Approved

MATSQUI (CP) — Voters in this lower mainland community have decided in favor of cocktail lounges and drinks with meals. Returning officer K. E. Calbrick said 56.8 per cent voted for the selling of beer, ale, stout and wine under dining room licences; 57 per cent in favor of selling liquor with meals in dining rooms and 57.7 per cent for cocktail bars. The same issue were narrowly defeated last year.

Airports Improved

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The federal government Monday announced grants to three northern British Columbia communities for improvements to their airports. Transport Minister Don Jamieson announced a grant of "up to $100,000" to Mackenzie's airport, $40,000 to McBride airport and a $10,000 grant to Valemount's airstrip.

Accidentally Shot

SALMON ARM (CP) — A 13-year-old boy, Roger Marshall, died Monday in a Kamloops Hospital after an apparent accidental shooting near his home at Notch Hill, about 17 miles west of here.

The boy, described as being deaf and slightly retarded, was target practicing with three other boys aged 13-16 in an open field on his grandmother's farm when he was hit Sunday.

Hunger Strike

NELSON (CP) — Three women members of the Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect completed the eighth day of a hunger strike in Nelson Jail Monday.

A police spokesman said Polly Chernoff, Anuta Kootnikoff and Vera Pankoff will eat fruit if it is given to them but will not eat anything else. The three are awaiting court appearances connected with charges of violation of probation. The charges arise from demonstrations earlier this month.

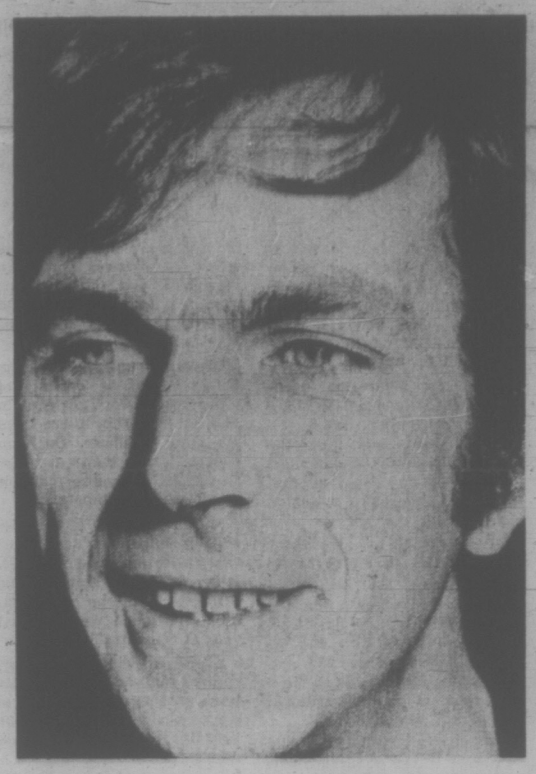
Helping Each Other Find The Way



Leader Don Braun awaits approval . . .

. . . on zoning of home to "half-way" house for former mental patients

—Irvine Strickland photos

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The aging tree-hidden house lies on the corner of Foul Bay and Granite.

It might become Oak Bay's first intermediate care centre for mental patients leaving the Eric Martin Institute to try and find their way back into the main stream of society.

Bought by the Creative Initiative Society, the house is being cleaned, walls whitewashed, and garbage carted away.

The society consists of four young men, three of them former patients, and legal secretary Jane Williams.

The men are Don Braun; Ken Chernoff, who's turned his back on his music profession to help; Michael van Godoever and Greg Howarth.

Their goal?

To help cut down the staggering statistics of patients who return to EMI time and time again, unable to make the rehabilitation road.

The group has had a bumpy ride since it tried to start a centre.

★ ★ ★

Braun said people are unwilling to rent when they find out why the premises are needed. This is why they've bought the house at 1010 Foul Bay.

They're not out of the woods yet.

In order to get a provincial licence to operate, the CIS has to persuade Oak Bay council to rezone that corner. The application is before council.

Van Godoever can see no reason why the rezoning shouldn't be granted "when there's an A & W stand down the street and an apartment across the way."

Braun said statistics show that one out of every five persons ends up in a mental institution at some time or another, and insists that Oak Bay is no more immune than other municipalities.

"I know five persons in Oak Bay who have been in EMI five or six times," he said "I know a doctor who's been back for the third time, another's a builder and one is the wife of a former lawyer."

He, himself, recalls the time he rented a room on St. Patrick, was so depressed one day that he went down to the beach to "end things." He would have, he said, "but I didn't have the guts."

Braun said two psychiatric nurses at EMI have volunteered to visit the centre daily. Two psychiatrists and two psychologists have also offered their services.

Braun and his co-workers, however, feel the main value of the centre is that it will be operated by people who have personal experience of the anguish and doubts faced by those they are trying to help.

"There's no barrier here, no professional-patient relationship where there's always that difference, a looking up and down process."

He and Chernoff said ex-patients will be referred to them by the Canadian Mental Health Association and will have no illusions about what lies ahead.

"We talk to them before they come here," Braun said, "and let them know what it's all about. People come here to work, they don't mope in their rooms. Nobody is assigned special duties. We will all take a hand at cooking, cleaning up and building."

He said the creative arts will be a base of their rehabilitation program. Craft shops and a sound-proof music room will be built in the basement.

★ ★ ★

A huge room on the main floor will house an art gallery, dining room and such "interaction" activities as dances and "drop-in" hours. They intend to build their own furniture.

"There'll be no mutual mollycoddling.

"We help each other look at ourselves. There can be no bull, no lies. You have to be honest," said Braun.

How do their immediate neighbors feel about having the centre next door?

Braun said they're all in favor and points to some curtains donated by a nurse who lives next door.

Chernoff said as soon as they have things straightened away they plan to throw a neighborhood party.

They don't know if Oak Bay council will grant the rezoning.

"But I do know that we're living in a sick society — Oak Bay, Victoria — Canada. We need these places. You just don't sweep people in need under the rug," said Chernoff.

Oak Bay MLA Dr. G. Scott Wallace shares their conviction that intermediate care for discharged mental patients is sadly lacking.

"Stressing that he's not conversant with all the facts surrounding the proposed CIA centre, Wallace said:

"In a general way I am very much in favor of creating this kind of facility, for which the need is tremendous.

"It costs only $6 a day to keep someone in one of these centres compared to damn close to $60 a day at EMI."

He intends to contact the CIS to see what can be done. The next step, though, is up to Oak Bay council.

Braun and his friends hope that step will be in their direction.

Girls Join Military Life

Only 'Things Biological' Will Separate Duties

Twenty-five girls had their first lick of military life today and liked what they savored.

They are part of the 174-strong contingent, given employment under the federal government's summer student militia training program.

They paraded at Bay Street Armory with their male counterparts, receiving issues of clothing and military mentoring.

They'll continue to receive the latter until Aug. 23.

The military scene apparently attracts the modern female. The officer in charge of the program said he has 37 more girls on his waiting list that he'd have enlisted if the money had been available.

Col. Owen Browne, a retired officer from the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry in Calgary, said the girls will be doing everything the boys do — except when "things biological" call for alternate skills.

Running through the itinerary, it would appear this means that the girls will parade — minus small arms — while the boys shoulder arms with the best of them.

They will be allowed — but not ordered — to try their hand at rifle and submachine firing at Heal's Range.

There'll be little discrimination, either, when the last, and possibly, the most challenging part of the program starts Aug. 16.

They'll be part of the contingent that heads for Port Alberni aboard a destroyer-escort and two minesweepers.

They'll march five miles inland to an abandoned logging area for a few days training in bush survival and other techniques. They'll learn how to live under shelter of pine boughs and other growth and feed on Krations.

"It will be no gourmet camp," said Browne.

If there's one big difference between the two sexes' programs it is the "open house" the girls will be asked to put on as an extra Aug. 23 at Work Point Barracks.

Describing it as a "challenge for the girls on closing day," Browne said they will be asked to do all the planning, organizing — carry out a sports tabloid and regale their guests with refreshments.

Vive la difference!

Four-Year Term Given Fleet Club Arsonist

By DAVID CLIMENHAGA
Times Staff

A 53-year-old Esquimalt man, convicted of starting a fire at the Fleet Club building in the Naden base of CFB Esquimalt, today was sentenced to four years in prison by Judge Tyrwhitt-Drake in Victoria county court.

The court dismissed an application by two insurance companies, Lloyds of London and Norwich Union Insurance that Gordon Allen McLaughlin of 1355 Lyall Street pay $41,819.90 for items destroyed in the fire.

Judge Tyrwhitt-Drake said the evidence presented by the insurance companies was "thin."

"There was not enough evidence before me to make a decision," he said.

The judge said the insurance companies' counsel had not proven that the insurance companies were persons and that they were grieved as is required under the criminal Code.

The insurance companies applied for compensation under a section of the Code that permits a court to order someone convicted of an indictable offence "to pay . . . an amount by way of satisfaction or compensation for loss of or damage to property" caused by the crime.

Insurance adjuster Clarence James Eisler testified earlier that he had made an inventory of the building's contents after the Oct. 24 fire.

The total loss was $46,819.90, he said, but the insurance premium specified $5,000 deductible so only $41,819.90 was asked by the companies.

The sum represented the loss of the building's contents, not the building itself since Lloyds and Norwich did not insure the building.

DAD'S CAR ROLLS ON TOT'S STOMACH

Two-year-old Mark O'Neill is in good condition and improving in Queen Victoria General Hospital today after his father's car rolled over him in the driveway of their home at 905 Ellery Sunday afternoon.

Michael O'Neill's car was parked with no one inside when it backed over the child's stomach. Mark's mother, who is expecting another child in a month, was treated for shock.

Aldermen Divided On New Sign Policy

Victoria aldermen appeared to be divided in their opinions today on the city's get-tough policy with regard to advertising signs.

After hearing submissions from sign and tourist industry representatives, protesting proposed amendments to the sign bylaw, some members of the public works committee said they thought valid points had been made.

But others, notably Ald. Clyde Savage, indicated they will continue to press for a firm policy of eliminating large visually-offending signs.

Said Savage: "You either stand on your two feet and say you're not going to give way, or you give an inch here and an inch there and end up with a worse bylaw than we have now."

Committee chairman Ald. Percy Frampton said council was taking a "major step" which in previous years it had not had the "guts" to tackle.

"If we can take the billboards and wall signs out there will be a terrific improvement in the city of Victoria," Frampton added.

However, the committee tabled action on the bylaw amendments to receive further submissions from affected parties, including the National Advertising Association.

Ald. Harold Olafson appealed for members of the public to come forward and state their views on what council was trying to achieve, "so that we can see if we're on the right track."

Most of the 90-minute meeting was taken up with presentation of a lengthy brief by Wilf Fraser, representing Neon Products of Canada Ltd.

Commenting on the city's proposal to phase out all standard billboards over a three-year period, Fraser suggested that the present 115 billboards in Victoria be replaced by 40 or 50 three-faced "prismatic type" signs located in busy commercial and industrial areas.

He said this type of sign had gained widespread acceptance, and his firm was prepared to make the change at a cost of $250,000 over a period of up to five years.

Among other recommendations, Fraser proposed that instead of phasing out third-party signs over three years, such signs should become non-conforming.

Normal building activity would reduce the number of signs if this policy were adopted, he said.

Representatives of some tourist attractions in the city told the committee their business would be affected if the legislation were adopted.

SIX OF EIGHT DUCKLINGS DIE

Six of the eight ducklings hatched by incubator last month after rescue from a construction site have died, the SPCA reported today.

Cause of their death isn't known, said secretary-manager Dave Beechin. The remaining two are thriving and have moved into outdoor quarters at the SPCA shelter on Napier Lane.

The ducklings' mother achieved local fame last month when she stubbornly refused to budge from her nest of 10 eggs, despite rock drilling and blasting which crept closer and closer.

Eventually her nest had to be moved to make way for the excavation work and the mother Mallard deserted it. The SPCA was able to hatch eight of the 10 eggs by incubator.

They're Amazed, Shocked, Dismayed

Reid Foes Shattered by 'About-Face'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Opponents of the Reid Centre expressed shock, dismay and disappointment today following the signing of a land-use contract which allows the Wharf Street development to proceed.

Several persons who had launched a protest petition to hand to Mayor Peter Pollen on his return from Europe next week said they were amazed that Acting Mayor Tom Christie had decided to sign the contract Monday.

James Gorst, of 3944 Wilkinson Road, said Christie was one of those who had joined Pollen in opposing highrise development on the waterfront.

"Now he has done a complete about-face."

The formal signing came at a brief, closed meeting of city council in Pollen's office Monday afternoon.

Christie told reporters later that none of the aldermen present — the only absentee beside Pollen was Ald. Mike Young — had changed their minds on the issue since the public hearing last month, and he saw no point in delaying the contract processing.

Officials said the action gives the final go-ahead to the controversial development; the issuing of a building permit is now a mere formality.

Christie's signature on the document (already signed by Vancouver developer J. A. Reid) also means finality for the bylaw authorizing the contract, officials explained.

Those staging a last-ditch attempt to block the Reid project had based their hopes on a provision of the Municipal Act which allows the mayor to return a bylaw for reconsideration within 30 days of its adoption.

But this avenue, apparently, is now closed.

Monte Vanton, 3336 Arbutus, one of the most outspoken critics of the proposed two-tower complex, said today he was "bloody dismayed" at the council action.

"This (the Reid Centre) is the Miami-Acapulco concept," he said. "Highrises on the waterfront made those cities disgusting and it's tragic to see Victoria headed the same way."

Vanton expressed disappointment that those organizing the campaign of opposition had not come up with a more "dynamic" program to arouse public attitudes.

Sam Lane, president of the Victoria Visitors Bureau, described Christie's signing as "one of the most catastrophic actions" ever taken by a council in the city's history.

"Future generations will live to regret this," he added.

Following Monday's meeting Christie said he felt it would have been "pointless and useless" for him to return the bylaw to council, and noted that there was no official notification to city hall that any protest petition was being organized.

In any case, he added, he didn't know if "the petition has any credibility or not."

Christie pointed out that when a visitors' comment book was made available in city hall together with a model and plans of the development, 66 per cent of the remarks entered were in favor of the Reid Centre.

The Naked Truth

WENDY DEY - EDITOR

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

Charlie Roy thought his doctor was crazy when he prescribed nudism as a partial remedy to his ulcer problem.

But he followed the doctor's advice and now, 12 years later, he's the owner of the 18-acre Nanaimo Tans Sunbathing Club, site of the Western Canadian Sunbathing Association's convention last weekend attended by 75 nudists from all over North America.

Roy, who first joined the Sol Sante Club near Cobble Hill, said: "I would go to the club Friday and be totally relaxed all weekend. At a nudist club everybody is the same. You can arrive in a shiny Rolls-Royce or a dilapidated Volkswagen, but as soon as you get into your uniform (or out of it) you're the same as anybody else.

"If we were all nudists there wouldn't be any wars because you couldn't tell who the enemy was," said Roy.

"Nudism doesn't cure illnesses but it helps," he said. "There are millions of pores on your body and tight clothing prohibits them from breathing. Exposure to direct sunlight lets them breathe and adapts your body to different temperatures. I haven't had a common cold for nine years."

Horst Haberler, named president of WCSA at the convention Saturday, looks upon nudism as mental relaxation and an important aspect of child-rearing.

"I am able to spend almost all my spare time with my children," he said. "It also breaks down barriers to give them a better outlook on life."

There are two kinds of clubs. A proprietor club is owned by one man who sells memberships and charges a daily fee for non-members. And a co-operative club is owned by a club that purchases land and sets membership fees according to the price of the land.

Activities include swimming, sauna-bathing, volleyball, badminton, archery, and, of course, sun-bathing.

WCSA publicity officer Oliver Nordby said some clubs try to keep up winter activities to hold the membership together. "Some people open their homes for parties, some clubs hold bingo games and some try to rent small pools. Not all winter activities are nude unless they have a warm clubhouse," Nordby said.

Asked at a nude board meeting Sunday how nudists feel about publicity, president Haberler replied: "We like to get all the exposure we can.

'We have our own nudist newspaper which is published 'under the cloak of respectability' and we try to inform the public through movies and radio of our aims and goals. We don't advocate everyone becoming nudists but our education program allows people to make their own decision."

The WCSA is one of five divisions of the American Sunbathing Association which includes 130 clubs over the entire continent. Each division holds a convention and delegates will attend an ASA covention later this year.

ASA president Bob Johnston, who attended last weekend's convention, said although he has seen no statistics on the professions of most nudists he has found a great number are school teachers and clergymen.

He said there are about 20,000 card-carrying members in North America and about 200,000 participating nudists. Memberships, Johnston added, increase at a rate of six to eight per cent a year.

The ASA is opposed to "free beaches or clothing optional beaches," said Johnston.

"These are isolated public beaches where people are permitted to go nude providing they don't bother non-nudists. But there are often problems with drunkeness, orgiastic behavior and pot-smoking which have nothing to do with nudity. It makes organized nudists look bad," he said.

Organized nudism began in Canada with the opening of Vancouver's Van Tans Club in 1939. At that time there were about 20 members. On Vancouver Island there are now four clubs and more than 100 participating members.

The newest club is the five-acre Tsolum Aries near Courtenay which opened April 24. It is operated by Marjorie and Frank Bryson who had Canada's first nude wedding last year at Nanaimo Tans.

Although the number of organized nudists in Canada has been growing, the attitude of our conservative society has kept the increase at a minimum.

So there you have it — the naked truth.

Play Parents' Rules For a Few More Years

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl and I don't think I've ever seen a problem like mine in your column.

I am dating a guy who is a member of a minority group, and to make a long story short, my father would make Archie Bunker look like Abbie Hoffman!

This guy is no bum. He's a college freshman who is working hard for his education, and someday he will amount to something. He's the kind of guy my folks want me to go with, except for the fact that he belongs to this minority group which my parents despise.

I hate to lie and sneak around to see him, because I am really proud of him, but my folks are so bigoted and prejudiced it's unbelievable.

Although he likes me a lot, he has never let our relationship get out of hand, if you know what I mean. His folks like me and I like them, but there is no way I can get my folks to agree to letting me go with him. Can you help me? — Parent Problems.

DEAR PROBLEMS: At age 16, your relationships are your parents' concern, and advice from a third party, unless sought by both sides, is out of order. I think your parents are unfair to judge a person without meeting him, but unfortunately until you are old enough to do as you wish, you will have to play by their rules. Time will solve your problem.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please settle an argument? How should I introduce my father's second wife? I introduced her as "my father's wife." My roommate contends that this is poor taste and I should have introduced the woman as "my mother." Since I was raised by my mother who is still very much alive and well, I think it would be a slight to her. Please advise me. — Whose Daughter?

DEAR DAUGHTER: Your roommate flunked this one. You will always be your mother's daughter regardless of who your father's wife is.

Under the circumstances you introduced the woman properly. If your father's wife had reared you, and you addressed her as "Mother," then she should be properly introduced as "my mother."

Economy, Technology —Not Women's Lib Rubs Out Motherhood

NEW YORK (UPI) — Defenders of motherhood won't like Jeanne Binstock. She maintains motherhood is on the way out as an occupation.

It can't be rubbed out completely for the obvious reason that the planet earth needs to be peopled with people. But motherhood is not what it used to be and must, indeed, fall into disrepute, according to the sociologist at the University of Massachusetts in Boston.

She follows trends and facts as she builds her case in a report titled Motherhood: An Occupation Facing Decline.

The report in The Futurist, journal of the World Future Society, notes that in 20 years, mothers will be "a mere specialty group in the United States" — like plumbers, engineers, or whatever speciality comes to mind.

The assistant professor of sociology isn't giving any credit to Betty Friedan, the mother of the women's liberation movement, for this expected change in motherhood.

"The state of affairs will not result from the women's liberation movement, but from economic factors and technological change," she said.

"Women's lib movements really are a consequence of technological change; they have appeared at the historical moment when a sharp reduction in the occupational group known as mothers is mandatory, and the technological capacity to achieve it is available."

Not as many women die in childbirth. Disease control makes the childhood safer. Drugs, operations and other advances help those alive to a dose of longevity. More people living longer helps to add to the crowding, according to any analysis of the population situation.

"... We are forced to face the fact that if we do not take from women their role of mother and replace it with something else, we will be throttled by the overproduction of babies," the sociologist cautions.

"We thus face the need to demand that the ancient and honorable occupation of motherhood fall into disrepute, and that women commit themselves to other occupations. Women must be liberated to enjoy the fruits of other occupations, whether they want to be or not."

The American woman today has two to three children instead of half a dozen or more. Childbirth no longer is like going into the front lines of combat. The mom doesn't stay up through the night with her sick children the way mothers used to. Medicines make that possible. Diaper services, convenience foods, wash-n-wear clothing have freed her more. The once 18-hour-a-day chore of mothering has been reduced, according to Professor Binstock, to a mere three hours a day.

Mothers for sometime have been fighting to hold onto their important status, despite the decline in actual necessary services rendered.

"Every occupational group fights for survival when threatened with technological obsolescence and tries to retain a monopoly over its technical skills," she said.

"Women — or rather mothers — are no exception: mothers continue to apply their customary technical skills even when unnecessary or even undesirable. Tender care turns into over-control; attention into excessive scrutiny.

"In an effort to maintain their traditional 18-hour-a-day useful, respected job in the face of its reduced tasks, mothers have been developing an obsession with the details of their children's internal lives, trivial social behavior and interpersonal attitudes.

"The mothers simply have nothing else to do. They use guilt to bind their children, even when grown, to themselves, for their children are their only occupational tools and sources of commitment. To give up their two or three over-manipulated children would mean retirement."

Prof. Binstock maintains that young people are being mothered to death. "They have been subject to a level of scrutiny and maternal investment and guilt that paralyzes them and makes them crawl the walls and scream for freedom," she said.

They long for real internal choice — not choice forced on them by guilt. And they are presenting us with magnificient new possibilities for freedom in the 21st century."

When the day that sociologist sees arrives, women will have a free choice of economic roles.

The sociologist says it may be quite surprising to discover that no more women will choose to be mothers than men would choose to be engineers. She maintains that kind of choice is what is needed if the population problem is to be solved.

Unisex at that stage will be fully developed. The sociologist sees men and women converging occupationally. She made these additional points:

— Nothing will distinguish men and women, socially and occupationally, from each other, since they will merge the features now kept so carefully in cubby-holes.

— Eventually women will be the policy-makers of those industries that deal in one way or another with issues of human motivation and internal needs — arts, entertainment, advertising, social service, education.

Little Insanity Helps Single Parents Told

TORONTO (CP) — A little insanity may be a big help in dealing with family problems, a Toronto psychiatrist told the Parent Without Partners convention last weeekend.

Dr. Peter Moore told single parents, gathered here for the organization's annual meeting, he could speak about single-parent families because he was raised in one. It was a happy, energetic, "if some what kooky, home," he recalled, and advised the single parents present not to be "too sane" in dealing with their own family problems.

Dr. Moore said a child in such a home has a chance to feel needed and to develop a sense of worth through helping to operate the home.

He said children in single-parent homes often are better off than children in homes where both parents are present, but "locked in a destructive relationship."

Dr. Moore warned single parents not to rush into new marriages or rely on married friends for companionship, and indicated he approved of sex for the single parent.

"I can only say it is a human need and if it is important to you, you will be a better parent and a better person if satisfied."

Psychologist Bruce Quarrington discussed the role of a person marrying a single parent and warned against the missionary approach — "You poor devils, how you need me" — and the approach that assumes no responsibility for the children.

He said a newcomer entering a family is in a similar position to an anthropologist visiting a strange tribe, with its unique myths and language.

Sunburned? Just Apply Walnut Leaf

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — People hypersensitive to ultraviolet rays may be able to walk in the sun for the first time in their lives thanks to a team of researchers and a Russian folk cure.

Dr. Walter J. Runge, staff member of the department of pathology at the University of Minnesota, suffered a severe sunburn during a trip to the Soviet Union some years ago. An elderly Russian told him to rub freshly ground walnut leaves on his skin to prevent sunburn the next time he went out in the sun.

The remedy worked, and Dr. Runge decided to find out which component of the leaves brought about the cure. It turned out to be a substance called juglone.

Now, years later, Runge and two fellow researchers have worked out a two-step method to protect persons suffering from allergic sensitivity to ultraviolet light.

Before going to bed, a person applies either a chemical sugar lotion or spray to his skin. Then, 15 minutes later, he applies lawsone, a chemical cousin to juglone, used because it gives a better skin tone.

The first chemical, with the tongue-twisting name of dihydroxyacetone, reacts with the skin and liberates certain chemical groups without detaching them from the skin. The second part of the sunscreen, lawsone, can now combine with these liberated groups and the combination becomes part ofthe skin. In essence a new top layer of skin is created with can absorb ultraviolet light.

The chemicals are applied nightly. Protection is accomplished after the first treatment and, in the majority of cases, persons who have had to shun the sun are free to swim, fish, ski. Neither water no perspiration affect the sunscreen.

Persons may be sensitive either to the short, ultraviolet rays which cause sunburn, or to the long ultraviolet rays, which are given off by both fluorescent lights and sunlight.

Recent tests on 77 patients showed that more than 75 per cent were helped significantly by the application of the two chemicals. They could stay in the sun, or under fluorescent lights, at least three times as long as before the treatment without developing symptoms of hypersensitivity such as rashes.

In addition to Dr. Runge, the research team consists of Dr. Ramon M. Fusaro, chairman of the department of dermatology at the University of Nebraska medical centre, and Dr. John A. Johnson, an assistant professor of the department of dermatology and biochemistry at the University of Nebraska.

The three men have been working with their sunscreen for 10 years in order to produce an effective, easy-to-do protection for those who are hypersensitive to ultraviolet rays.

In a recent interview, Dr. Fusaro said that the sunscreen may be ready to be marketed within a year or two.

When Your Oldest Becomes the Sitter

Recently we realized that the babysitters we were hiring were six months older and half a head shorter than our daughter.

"I can stay by myself," our daughter declared. "I'll even take care of 'it'," she added, gesturing toward her brother, who retaliated by biting her ankle.

"If we leave you alone, there will be no fighting," I announced, disengaging her brother's teeth. "No eye gouging, throwing things out of the second floor windows, and no nipping at the scotch like the other sitters do."

The first time we left them alone we wrote down the telephone numbers of the police, ambulance, fire department, doctor, dentist, veterinarian, and Dial-a-Prayer. Somewhere in the list I must have included the number of the movie we were attending, because halfway through a particularly poignant speech, George C. Scott began paging Mr. and Mrs. Stahl. Amid boos and catcalls, we leaped up, dropping our giant size box of jujubes, and raced to the telephone.

"Whatsthematter?" I shrieked.

"Can I have a popsicle?" our son asked.

Next we tried going to a party. While everyone else was out in the kitchen having a marvelous time throwing ice cubes, I was sitting in the bedroom on a pile of coats arbitrating disputes over the telephone. "Put Eric on . . . Laurie says that you're humming while she's trying to watch 'Mannix' . . . Put Laurie on . . . Eric said that you drew a moustache on his Bobby Orr poster . . . The dog did what?"

My neighbor commiserates with me. "Once I let my husband convince me to go to the burlesque," she said. "There I was, crouched in the seat with my coat collar up over my ears, with all these weirdos behind me yelling 'Way to go, baby' when the usher starts yelling for Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Atwater to call home immediately.

"We had to get up. I mean, the kids' safety and well-being was of paramount importance. Besides we could move away and start all over again in another city."

"What had happened?"

"Georgie wanted to know whether he needed to wear the tops of his pajamas."

BIOLOGICAL REASONING

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Hunger whets sexual appetites and protein deficiency increases fertility in women, a Brazilian economist and sociologist said Monday.

Josue De Castro, who is lecturing at the invitation of the Venezuelan State Planning Agency, said that in Latin American and Asia the high birth rate among the poor had biological reasons.

"The man that suffers hunger is compensated by an increased sexual appetite while the scarcity of proteins increases fertility in women," he said.

NOMINATIONS OPEN FOR BAND CHIEF

DUNCAN — Nominations for Cowichan Indian Band chief and a new councillor will be held at the band office from 7.30 p.m. to 9.30 p.m. Thursday.

Byelection day will be held a week later, June 20.

The positions of chief and band manager became vacant on June 16 when Dennis Alphonse resigned.

Alphonse has stayed on temporarily as band manger until the end of this week when a new manger will be hired.

The new councillor position has become available because the department of Indian affairs agreed to allow 12 members and a chief on the band council instead of the current 11.

Aldermen 'Ticked Off' by Elford

Mayor Frances Elford Monday night tongue-lashed two of her aldermen and accused a member of the Oak Bay Recreation Commission of "mudslinging" during council discussion of the controversial Farmer Construction Ltd. swap proposal.

In spite of this, opposing aldermen stood firm in their conviction that the Farmer proposal not be put to referendum at this time.

Mayor Elford said Ald. Shirley Dowell had made "several interesting and revealing statements" in a radio broadcast on Farmer's proposal.

The plan calls for Farmer to be given the valuable Victoria Riding Academy site, on which to build three 12-storey towers and 50 townhouses, in exchange for building a curling-ice hockey complex. The latter would be built on municipal land near the Oak Bay junior and senior secondary schools.

The mayor accused Mrs. Dowell of saying in the broadcast that she was in favor of the people voting on a sport complex. Ald. Dowell replied that she was in favor of a sports complex and a referendum on it as a separate issue from the academy development.

The mayor also said Ald. Brian Smith was wrong in saying she had said the Farmer bid was the last chance Oak Bay had for a sports complex. She said this was a "phoney charge."

She reminded Smith and others on council that they had insisted on a public hearing when developer John Mace had wanted to build highrises on the Windsor block.

Smith got "hear, hears" of support when he commented: "I feel as if I'm being scolded, ticked off by a teacher!"

Referring to a letter against the Farmer proposal, sent by Trustee Peter Bunn, a member of the Oak Bay Recreation Commission, she described it as "mud-slinging of the worst sort."

The public first learned that Farmer had proposed the swap deal to council in a secret meeting in a Times' story June 8.

The story contained information from the Nairne report, which recommended that the academy land be used for a combination of town houses and garden apartments. As a second choice, the Nairne report recommended that the present use as a riding academy could be continued.

Monday night the mayor said whoever had given the confidential information to the Times knew that "chances of complete acquisition of property for the recreation centre would be seriously jeopardized."

ALL DOCUMENTS PUBLIC

Council voted to put all material, excluding that pertaining to purchase of two lots needed to complete the sports complex site, before the public. This includes municipal officials' reports and the confidential report of McCarter, Nairne and Partners, Ltd. of Vancouver.

Smith and Goult voted against this, saying that the McNairne report contained information that would be useful to developers.

Ald. Douglas McLelland said, "I think it is a good thing we're getting more and more information out. It's been heresy to suggest it is a good business deal. We can now explore it without the feeling of being heretics."

A surprise came when Ald. Dowell announced that a proposal had been received that afternoon from a man who wanted to build three-storey apartments on the academy site and was offering $700,000 for the land.

Ald. John Goult said the Farmer bid had come at a "politically inopportune" time, stating that council had been on the verge of presenting a referendum on a sports complex to the voters and had spent $60,000 in fees to architect John Di Castri.

Asserting that all members favor a sports complex, Goult added:

"We're not against recreation — we're not against the kids of Oak Bay — this is nonsense. The only question is method — how we are going to go about it?"

Goult said the $700,000 bid for the academy site "is something that gives the ile to the suggestion that there'll be no development unless we go along with Farmer and accept their 12-storey towers."

Mayor Elford said no referendum could be expected on a sports complex until September and council members agreed with her that all the fact should be put before the public.

Earlier in the evening, Jack Sambrooke, spokesman for the Oak Bay Recreation Group, told of a canvass made in the academy district. He said out of 254 houses canvassed, 210 were in favor, 26 were opposed and residents of the other 18 homes had not been in.

On McLelland's insistence, council received the $700,000 proposed for the academy site, tabled it, so that it could become a public document.

The proposal came from Monte Vanton, a former Los Angeles real estate broker.

Mayor Elford had said earlier, "Apparently, we should look at a vague proposal for $700,000 — 350 units and a site coverage of 35 per cent."

She compared this to Farmer's bid which she said would net $1 million (value of the complex on the market) and would have a site coverage of 18.7.

Interviewed later, Vanton said that some of the mayor's figures were wrong, although it would be 350 units compared to Farmer's 410.

"The site coverage would actually be just over 20 per cent and the density 340,000 square feet on 400,000 square feet of land, compared to Farmer's 411,000 square feet."

New Deal Due For 'Heights'

DUNCAN—City council is considering offering services to Eagle Heights subdivision residents through the Regional District.

Ald. Hamish Mutter, the city's director on the Cowichan Valley Regional Board, suggested Monday evening that council contact the regional board and offer the use of the city's sewer lagoon and fire department for Eagle Heights to avoid duplication.

The rest of the services, such as parks, could be considered later, he added.

This is an about-turn on council's stand less than a month ago when it told Eagle Heights residents if they wanted sewer and fire protection from the city, they must agree to amalgamate.

On June 24 the residents voted 56 per cent against joining the city and said they would ask the regional district to help supply the services.

The residents turned down a similar amalgamation plebiscite some years ago.

'NEW GAME'

"They have turned us down and there is no use crying about it," Mutter said. "It's a brand new ball game now."

Mutter pointed out that when the city constructed the sewer lagoon, North Cowichan constructed one right beside it.

"There is no earthly reason why we should have three lagoons in the same area," he said. "Why don't we approach the regional district to let them use it or even turn it over to them. It is a good chance for us to have joint services. We have to do away with duplication."

Mutter went on to say that "this may come as a surprise but I feel we should take the same step with the fire department. It would be ridiculous if the regional district set up another separate department."

He suggested that the gap between Eagle Heights and Cowichan Bay could be filled by setting up satellite fire stations.

Council agreed to consider Mutter's recommendations.

AUSSIES ARRIVE

NANAIMO (CP) — An advance party of Australians arrived here Saturday from Sydney to prepare for the July 23 Nanaimo to Vancouver Bathtub Race. Team manager Jack Murray and Jamie Wailmot, two-time champion tubber at Sydney, checked inat bathtub headquarters. Ald. S. Carr Hordern, deputy to the Lord Mayor of Sydney, is due later this week.

CPR Station Too Costly For Museum

DUNCAN — The idea of converting the 60-year-old CPR station into a museum has been dropped because of high renovation costs.

Mayor Jim Quaife announced the decision Monday night, saying that the project, commemorating Duncan's 60th anniversary, would have cost of $70,000.

But the city hasn't given up. Quaife said council is now investigating taking over the old post office in Duncan to convert for civic and museum use. The request has been submitted through Cowichan-Malahat MP Tommy Douglas to the federal government.

The old building with the town clock on it, which was constructed in 1912, is currently being used by the department of manpower and part-time by the Indian affairs and Indian health departments.

Others on the board of directors are Winnie Gardiner, Dennis Gallagher, Joan Buckingham, Phyllis Lindsey, George Manning, Audrey McDonald and Karl Drost.

School Health Costs Cause More Friction

Costs for services rendered continue to cause friction between the Greater Victoria school board and the Metropolitan Board of Health.

The school board's finance committee Monday night received an invoice from the City of Victoria — cost collectors for the health board — which sought a total of $65,000 as the school board's share of health costs for the first half of 1972.

But the finance committee decided to reiterate its earlier stand on the matter and recommended to the full board that only $53,200 be paid for the first half of the year.

The school board has budgetted only $106,400 for health services this year, forced to cut back on the item after defeat of the operating costs referendum held in March.

The issue of health costs has been contentious for both boards for more than a year, with the health board's 1971 bill for services still being negotiated with the school board.

The health board feels the school board should pay the fixed percentage of the total health board budget that it has in the past, but the school board wants to pay a lump sum and receive services proportionate to that amount.

The $65,000 bill forwarded by the health board represents about half of what the health board expects the school board to pay this year, but the school board does not intend to pay that much.

Assault Trial Continues

The trial of David Charles Ferguson, 35, of Saanich, charged with indecent assault after an incident last November, opened in Victoria county court Monday.

Ferguson was charged after a 17-year-old girl claimed he assaulted her at about 6:30 p.m. Nov. 26. She and a friend were hitchhiking downtown from the corner of Burnside and Harriet when they were picked up by the man she identified as the accused.

The girl told the court that while in the car the man put his arm around the two girls. Her friend jumped out of the car, she said, but the man held on to her.

She was driven to a ballpark in View Royal and various sexual acts were performed on the way and at the park.

After the acts they drove back towards town, when they stopped at a store she left the car and phoned police, she said.

Defence counsel in the trial is Dermod Owen-Flood. Crown council is Brian Smith.

The trial continues before Judge M. L. Tyrwhitt-Drake and a jury of eight men and four women.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me,

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

PSALM 23.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

A Remarkable Book About Love

I have just read with great enjoyment a remarkable book by Nathan A. Shiff, M.D., entitled "Martha." It is the splendidly told story of a man's love for his fine and devoted wife, and emotions that "tore his heart out" after she died suddenly of a stroke.

Dr. Shiff says that he continually asked, "Why did Martha die?" Not a very scientific question. We only know how people die. But it was a question I could not stop asking." He was particularly distressed because he is a doctor, and he speaks of the guilt he felt because "A doctor saves lives; but, I couldn't save hers."

He tells of the months after her death when he was overwhelmed with terrible feelings, and was running away from life. He visited Martha's grave each day.

Like many persons who have suffered, the doctor spoke of strong feelings of anger about his loss. This anger frightened him. "To be angry at life was a contradiction of everything I thought I was." He had trouble during the night going to sleep. He wondered during this time if he would ever stop crying.

But after a time, he began to feel that "something was telling me I had to live again." Then his father talked to him and he accomplished more in a few words than a psychiatrist could have done in months. The father said, "You are killing yourself. Martha would not want that. Ask yourself what Martha would want."

With that, Dr. Shiff began to gain strength. He left behind some of the anger and despair that had been so rough on him. He said, "I was a doctor again and I do not doubt that helping others live saved my life."

I have found that to be so true. Sometimes when I have been distressed about something, or have felt a brief spell of depression, I have always been able to pull myself out of my mood if I could help several patients with their distresses.

As he gradually began to feel that life was worth living, to "put the pieces together," he started "looking into the past for answers." Much of the book has to do with a description of the beautiful love he had with Martha — his memories of their happiness together from the time they met when he was an intern earning $10 a month, through their courtship and their marriage. He tells of the many things she did to make their life together exciting and satisying to both of them.

The book is a wonderful and beautiful tribute to an unusual woman and an unusual marriage. Many young wives could learn much from reading about "Martha."

Bennett, Evans Scorn Davis, Sign Spill Pact

DOUGLAS (CP) — Pledging to wage an international battle against oil spill pollution, Premier Bennett and Washington Gov. Dan Evans signed a memorandum of co-operation in ceremonies at the Canada-U.S. border Monday.

B.C. Attorney-General Leslie Peterson read the memorandum to about 150 persons who gathered to witness the signing. He said the program of co-operation would create an integrated control and communication system and establish traffic patterns and approach procedures for determining the times, places and methods of transporting oil.

It would include a monitoring and inspections system, a data bank to provide technical and scientific information and joint plans of action to cope with oil spills. A task force of government representatives will be appointed and the federal governments of both countries encouraged to participate.

Discussions leading to the memorandum stemmed from an oil spill at the Atlantic Richfield Co. oil refinery at Cherry Point, Wash., June 4 which fouled beaches in Southern B.C.

Premier Bennett said B.C.'s $24.2 million disaster fund will be used to finance the B.C. share of costs involved in the program.

Bennett said he doesn't expect many civil service jobs will have to be created for the program because existing pollution control staff and equipment will be used.

The disaster fund was established in 1969 out of revenue surplus funds.

Both Bennett and Gov. Evans dismissed the claim by Environment Minister Jack Davis that the agreement was of little use because such agreements come within federal jurisdiction in Canada and the U.S.

"That is partisan politics and it has no place here," said Bennett.

"The oil doesn't lap at the national capitals," added Evans.

The premier also denied a charge by B.C. Liberal Leader David Anderson that signing the agreement meant accepting the idea of heavy coastal traffic of tankers carrying Alaska oil. Bennett said the B.C. legislature made clear its opposition to the tanker traffic.

Both the premier and the governor made clear they were not entering into a formal international agreement, explaining that only their federal governments could do this.

Kinver Beach Now Fit for Swimming

When it comes to beaches and lakes in Greater Victoria approved for bathing, score one for the environment and swimmers this year.

A list published annually by the metro health board shows one location has been shifted from the "closed for bathing" to the "approved for bathing" column.

It is Kinver Beach, also known as Fleming Beach, east of Saxe Point in Esquimalt. The new mile-long sewage outfall at Macaulay Point is credited with cleaning it up.

Apart from that, the list continues much the same as in recent years, with 23 locations where water is clean enough for bathing and 15 where it is not.

Loon Bay, beside Cadboro Bay, is new on the approved list this year. Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior public health officer, said today his department had been asked to check it out and a study showed water quality satisfactory.

Previously the department had not thought it used sufficiently to include in the annual survey.

Added to areas closed for bathing is Bazan Bay to Resthaven in the Sidney area. Whitbread said this is just a more explicit description covered formerly by the designation Sidney waterfront.

Beaches approved for bathing:

Kinsmen Gorge Pool, Saxe Point, Kinver or Fleming Beach, Dallas Road waterfront from Oswego Street to Howe Street, Gonzales Bay (Foul Bay), McNeil Bay (Shoal Bay), Willows Beach, Loon Bay, Cadboro Bay except a small portion in the northeasertly part, adjacent to Tudor Avenue, Mount Douglas Park beach (except at the mouth of creek), Island View Beach, Patricia and Cole Bays, Esquimalt Lagoon, Weirs Beach, Witty's Lagoon and Thetis, Beaver, Elk, Prospect, Langford and Glen Lakes.

Areas closed for bathing: (all posted).

Victoria Inner Harbor, up to and including Selkirk Waters, the Gorge and Portage Inlet, Esquimalt Harbor and adjacent areas, the Dallas Road wterfront, from Howe Street, including Clover Point and Ross Bay, to St. Charles Street; the Twin Beaches, Golf Link Beaches and Glenlyon Beach, all beside Beach Drive; the foot of Rutland Road, the foot of Humber Road, a small portion of Cadboro Bay on the northeast corner adjacent to Tudor, Deep Cove, Cordova Bay at mouth of creeks, Sidney waterfront, Bazan Bay to Resthaven and Brooks Park Beach at Brentwood.

A NEW POST FOR BEAULNE

OTTAWA (CP) — Yvon Beaulne, Canadian ambassador to the United Nations, is leaving the external affairs department temporarily to take a high-raking job in the secretary of state department.

Less than two months ago it was announced that Beaulne, 53, had been appointed external affairs chief of protocol after a little more than three years at the UN.

Monday, hewas named an assistant undersecretary to state to succeed Andre Fortier, previously appointed director of the Canada Council.

Capt. Cocks Promoted to Commodore

Capt. Robert Cocks, 47, of Victoria is one of three senior Canadian armed forces officers to be promoted.

Now base commander of CFB Shearwater, N.S., Cocks has been promoted to commodore and will be chief of staff for logistics and administration at Maritime command headquarters in Halifax.

Capt. Andrew Collier, 48, of Kamloops, has also been promoted to commodore rank.

He will be in command of the Canadian flotilla in the Atlantic. He is now deputy chief of staff for combat readiness at maritime command headquarters.

Col. Kenneth Lett, 48, of Carp, Ont. has been promoted brigadier-general.

Now director of exercise and evaluation at NORAD region headquarters at Montana's Malstrom air force base, he will move to training command headquarters in Winnipeg as chief of staff.

Smuggling Charge Laid

SEATTLE (AP) — Catherine Morgan, 26-year-old daughter of a British diplomat, is being held in a Seattle jail for a hearing on a drug smuggling charge before a federal magistrate next Thursday.

Miss Morgan was arrested July 4 by U.S. customs officers at the Pacific Highway crossing at Blaine as she was crossing from Canada in a commercial bus. The officers accused her of smuggling 21 pounds of hashish into the U.S. on her way to San Francisco where she lives in a commune.

Her father, Alan Morgan, formerly was British consul in San Francisco and now is attached to the foreign office in London, a British consulate officer said.

Visitors Don't Show

MOOSE JAW (CP) — City officials were all set Monday to receive executives of a Romanian company who are considering the construction of a tractor assembly plant in Saskatchewan but the men never appeared.

The city's economic development commission, which is competing with Saskatoon for the assembly plant, had made what they called elaborate plans to receive the group, due to arrive on Sunday.

College Head Resigns

RED DEER (CP) — Dr. Mervyn Eastman, 41, announced Monday his resignation as president of Red Deer College, now run by a provincial government administrator following a public inquiry into the way the institution was operated.

The resignation was accepted by Dr. Raymond Fast, the government-appointed administrator.

In a prepared statement, Dr. Eastman said: "While I very much regret having to resign from the college, I believe that it would be impossible for me to accomplish an effective job under the circumstances that have prevailed at the college during the last few months."

He was president of the eight-year-old college for two years and he and his administration were the subject of criticism by the student council and faculty early this year.

A report by Dr. T. C. Byrne, a one-man inquiry commission, placed some of the blame for the college's difficulties with Dr. Eastman. Enrolment at the college last year was 816.

$1,000 Prize Won

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP) — Irwin Peterson and his 23-year-old son Steve won the canoe derby at the Flin Flon Trout Festival on the weekend, finishing the 81-mile course in a total time of nine hours, 45 minutes.

It was the fourth win for the elder Peterson and a first for Steve. The Petersons, of Anoka, Minn., are carpenters and built their own canoes along with paddles.

The Petersons led the gruelling three-day contest from the start and won $1,000 to prize money.

Problem Compounded

EDMONTON (CP) — Major washouts from June floods along 37 miles of the 230-mile Alberta Resources Railway have compounded problems faced by the financially-troubled railway while the provincial government is trying to rearrange its operation.

Flood damage is expected to reach millions of dollars and could complicate discussions between the provincial government and Canadian National Railways to renegotiate a 20-year lease. Under the lease, CN operates the provincially-built line and assists in repaying the $95 million cost through rental on goods handled.

Grain Sale Coming

WINNIPEG (CP) — Chief commissioner G. N. Vogel of the Canadian Wheat Board said Sunday President Nixon's announcement of a $750-million sale to the Soviet Union of U.S.-grown grains over the next three years will be followed by a similar announcement from the wheat board.

In an interview, Vogel said the Soviet Union has been negotiating with the Canadian Wheat Board for "primarily feed grains" and an announcement could be expected within the next few weeks.

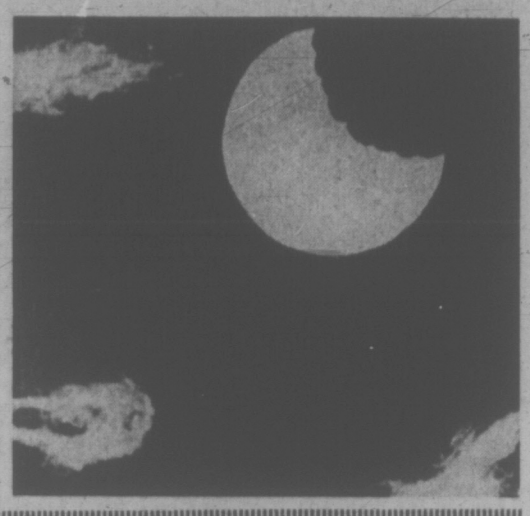
89th YEAR No. 27 ★★★ VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1972 ★★★ 10 CENTS DAILY, 20 CENTS SATURDAY



BITE-SIZE ECLIPSE was not seen by Victorians Monday night because of cloud conditions. But Times photographer Bill Halkett using secret photography devices (nine-tenths imagination, one-tenth technology) managed to block out all but three cirrus wisps and snapped the celestial dragon chewing the moon into a partial eclipse. June Unemployment Highest Ever

Times News Services

Unemployment across Canada jumped by 17,000 to 658,000 in June, the highest figure ever for that month, Statistics Canada reported today.

In June last year, the number of people without jobs was 551,000, or 6.2 per cent of the labor force. In percentage terms, however, unemployment this June was the same as June 1971, as the number of persons in the labor force increased.

Unemployment in British Columbia increased from 66,000 (7.1 per cent in June last year to 75,000 (7.7 per cent) this year. The June percentage was down from 8 per cent in May.

The increase across Canada occurred despite a greater-than-usual gain last month in over-all employment. But the creation of new jobs failed to catch up to the growing number of job-seekers.

There was a larger-than-usual increase in employment in manufacturing, and more jobs were spread through all other industries, though the increase in government employment was less than usual.

There were an estimated 320,000 unemployed young people, aged up to 24, and the unemployment rate in that age bracket rose to 12.4 per cent in June from 11.3 in May.

Unemployment for the 25-and-older workers declined to 249,000 in June from 283,000 in May, but remained above the June figure last year, 238,000. This meant that the unemployment rate for that group declined to 3.8 per cent from 4.3 per cent in May. It was 3.7 per cent in June last year.

The problem showed in the usual spring influx into the labor force of students — 14 to 19 — looking for either full-time or summer jobs.

In June this year, 47.5 per cent of all teen-aged boys in the country, and 35.1 per cent of all teen-aged girls, were either working or looking for work.

These rates compared with 36.5 and 28.1, respectively, only two months earlier when school was in. Both rates were higher this year than in June, 1971.

The number of unemployed teen-aged boys rose last month to 118,000 from 77,000 in May, and the number of unemployed teen-aged girls jumped to 66,000 from 45,000.

The labor force — employed and unemployed — rose to nearly 9.15 million last month from 8.89 million in May and 8.86 million in June last year. This was an increase of 3.3 per cent in the year.

The number of workers employed also rose 3.3 per cent in the year, to 8.58 million in June this year from 8.30 million a year earlier. It was 8.34 million in May this year.

Mass Jail Escape At Millhaven

CONVICTED MURDERER Edward Woods, one of 14 men who snipped their way to freedom from Ontario's maximum-security Millhaven penitentiary, was the first escaper recaptured when he tried to run a police roadblock five miles from the prison.

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Two escaped convicts were recaptured today as police armed with shotguns and high-powered rifles continued to track 12 of 14 dangerous prisoners — two of them convicted murderers — who cut their way out of Millhaven penitentiary in Canada's largest prison break on record.

Robert Clark, 38, of Tillsonburg, Ont., serving a life sentence, was captured by police and prison guards in a wooded area near the Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. plant about three miles from the prison.

Earlier, police captured convicted murderer Edward Woods, 26, of Burlington, Ont., after he tried to crash a roadblock at Odessa on Highway 2, five miles north of the prison.

No details were available on the Clark capture which came after police moved in on woods near the cement plant.

Woods was caught after police cruisers forced a stolen truck he was driving onto a lawn and officers wrestled him to the ground. A passenger escaped by running down a creek bed.

The 14 prisoners broke out of the maximum-security prison Monday night by cutting through a chain link fence.

Three of the escapers were convicted murderers and two of them are still at large. Of the others, police list most as dangerous.

An area within a radius of 20 miles from the prison has been sealed off by cruisers, boats and aircraft and the convicts are still believed to be within five miles of the prison.

Many of the prisoners at Millhaven were taken there after a four-day rebellion by 500 prisoners at nearby Kingston penitentiary in April, 1971, left two convicts dead, the institution wrecked and 10 other prisoners injured.

McGovern Clinches Nomination

Times News Services

MIAMI BEACH — Senator George McGovern clinched the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination today, going over the top minutes after his rivals Senators Hubert Humphrey and Edmund Muskie withdrew from the race.

An Associated Press poll showed a combination of newly-attracted delegates plus one-time supporters of Humphrey and Muskie added up to a first-ballot victory for McGovern.

"After consultation with some of my closest friends and supporters, I have determined that I will not permit my name to be entered in nomination at the convention, and I am now releasing my delegates to vote as they wish," Humphrey said.

Muskie said he was quitting because it was apparent that McGovern was going to be the nominee. Under these circumstances, Muskie said, there was no point in having his name even introduced into nomination.

Humphrey's decision virtually assures McGovern of a first-ballot win when voting for the party's presidential nominee begins Wednesday evening.

McGovern just 43 votes short of the 1,509 needed for victory and Humphrey's 429-plus delegates, many of them almost sure to back him, will put him easily past the required quota.

According to associates, Humphrey decided to pull out of the race following George McGovern's decisive victory in the crucial California credentials fight.

Humphrey aides said he felt it was an indication that the South Dakotan had the votes to capture the nomination.

McGovern recaptured 151 California delegates with stunning ease early today, halting Humphrey's coalition of old-line Democrats dead in its tracks about five hours after the first gavel fell starting the party's "new look" nominating convention.

He triumphed by an unofficial tally of 1,618 to 1,239 — far more than the 1,438 vote majority required under ground rules laid down by party chairman Lawrence O'Brien.

McGovern had contended throughout his battle that Humphrey, teaming with most of his other competitors, had unfairly upset the winner-take-all rule in California after agreeing in advance to accept the primary results.

'GREAT ESCAPE' A SINKING FLOP

LAKE GEORGE, N.Y. (UPI) — Escape artist Mario Manzini had one of those days Monday.

As promised, the 30-year-old Manzini allowed himself to be handcuffed, leg-ironed and placed in a packing crate which was then nailed shut and lowered into Lake George.

Also as promised, he escaped from the box in less than 90 seconds.

So far, so good. Except for several small problems.

All of the 500 persons who had gathered on the dock to witness the great escape patterned after the stunt by the late Harry Houdini, could hear and see exactly how it was done.

First of all, as the box was being nailed shut, the sound of shackles being removed inside could be heard loud and clear. Then the box wouldn't sink and bobbed around on the surface.

Suddenly, a concealed door in the box popped open and Mancini popped out, in full view of all.

FLQ Man 'Safe'

MONTREAL (CP) — One of the first Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists is protected by special status under France's foreign affairs ministry, according to a local newspaper. The weekly tabloid Photo Journal says Richard Bizier, 27, has been granted status and documents as a Canadian refugee which prevent him from being extradited to Canada from any country without the approval of the French foreign ministry.

The newspaper says Bizier sought political asylum in the islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon, French territory off Newfoundland, while on bail facing charges in connection with the 1968 St. Jean Baptiste Day riot.

Bizier was charged with disturbing a public gathering and participating in a riot. A warrant for his arrest is outstanding.

A spokesman for the newspaper said Bizier hid for some time in Quebec's Abitibi region and made it to French territory by mid-1970.

Bizier served four months of a six-month sentence for placing a time bomb at an RCAF building in 1963 during the first wave of FLQ bombings.

The newspaper says Bizier was issued documents Nov. 26, 1971, by the French Office for the Protection of Refugees and Stateless Persons.

BORIS BEGINS WITHOUT BOBBY

REYKJAVIK (AP) — World championship chess began today without Bobby Fisher, the American challenger.

He showed up seven minutes after Soviet titleholder Boris Spassky made the first move.

It seemed another one of these psychological ploys that chess masters often use in an attempt to unsettle their opponents.

Spassky was there on the dot, waited a minute, then calmly pushed his queen's pawn forward two spaces.

Referee Lothar Schmid of West Germany pushed the button on the time clock and the match had begun.

Seven minutes later Fisher appeared.

With long strides he sped to the black leather swivel chair placed behind the white side of the board.

Applause, which greeted Fischer's arrival, increased when Spassky moved forward from the side of the stage where he had been waiting to shake Fischer's hand.

The American took a minute to regard the board and the queen's pawn opening Spassky favors.

He moved his king's side knight to the queen bishop three squares.

Melon Bombs Out

Times News Services

That watermelon bomb which landed on the front pages of Canada and the U.S. yesterday, Monday night went S-P-L-A-T . . . all over the faces of several Los Angeles police officers.

They are the cops who conned newsmen into believing that a giant watermelon brought into a precinct house for a sack by two patrolmen was actually evidence in a case of "assault with a deadly watermelon," and had been dropped with felonious intent on the head of an area resident by a peeved girl friend.

However, further investigation into the case by school detectives showed that the alleged occurrence never took place. As a result, several officers face suspensions without pay for the hoax.

So, unfortunately, the Great Melon Caper just doesn't hold water.

Fallers Put IWA Out on Limb

Determination by fallers to continue their walkout is likely to render academic the narrow vote in favor of a new contract by coast members of the International Woodworkers of America.

Representatives of the 115 companies were meeting in Vancouver this afternoon to vote on a recommendation by their bargaining agent, Forest Industrial Relations, that they also accept the new contract.

Fallers, however, remain adamant that they want a standardized pricing formula for their varying piece-rates, and not the day wage rate proposed in the settlement.

The official IWA vote was to be announced today. Unofficially, the union announced that 6,730 were in favor and 5,915 opposed, or 53 per cent. Roughly half the IWA members didn't vote.

At noon, a brief IWA statement said the coast negotiating committee "has advised FIR the union membership has accepted the proposed settlement.

"However, union picket lines will be maintained until such time as the industry has announced its acceptance."

The companies' vote was also expected to be announced late today.

But if the fallers don't go back to work, log shortages evident before the official IWA strike began June 22 will worsen. Eight hundred fallers began walking out last April.

Vancouver IWA local president Syd Thompson isn't op-

Protestants Menace IRA

Times News Services

BELFAST — Tough-talking Protestants threatened today to "eliminate" the Irish Republican Army if the British army does not take action against the "murderers and rebels".

"Unless the army takes the initiative we will take steps to eliminate the IRA ourselves," the Ulster Defence Association declared in a statement.

The grim warning came on the eve of Wednesday's Orange Order parades, planned to commemorate the 1690 Battle of the Boyne which established Protestant domination over Northern Ireland's Catholics. In past years, the parades have sparked violence.

About 500 additional British soldiers are to arrive in Ireland today. Another 700 will follow later, bringing to 17,000 the number of soldiers on duty there.

The UDA, whose leaders claim they can call up 40,000 armed men, denounced the 13-day IRA ceasefire which ended Sunday. They called on Northern Ireland secretary William Whitelaw not to negotiate with the IRA, "who are nothing but murderers and rebels."

In response to the UDA "elimination" threat, a rank-and-file IRA member commented: "This is the sort of thing we have been expecting for some time now. We're not really worried but we see it as our clear duty to defend our areas."

The body of a young man, hooded and gagged, was found early today in Carlisle Circus, a predominantly Protestant neighborhood.

Sporadic gunfire continued through the night in several areas of Belfast, and just after midnight a 100-pound bomb demolished shops near the Roman Catholic Unity Flats housing block. One bystander was slightly injured.

In London, the disclosure by William Whitelaw that he met representatives of the underground Irish Republican Army in his capacity as minister of Ulster affairs won support from the opposition Labor party but stirred hostile reaction in some Conservative quarters.

Denied Lawyer, Man Beats .08

HALIFAX (CP) — A charge of driving with a blood alcohol level of more than .08 was dismissed in court Monday when the defendant said he was not permitted to call a lawyer.

It was the first breath analysis machine case here since the Supreme Court of Canada recently ruled that a person has a right to call a lawyer before taking a breath test.

Crown Prosecutor Dick Hubley said he would appeal the decision.

BANDIT BLINDS VICTIMS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Police are searching for a bandit who they said gouged out the eyes of two of his holdup victims after robbing them of small amounts.

Investigators said Monday they are "quite sure" that grocer Samuel C. Schafer, 72, and gasoline station attendant Robert Paro, 19, were victims of the same bandit, although a second man was with him during the attack on Paro.

Schafer was choked, robbed of $21 and blinded early Sunday at his grocery store.

Before dawn Monday, less than 24 hours later, Paro was accosted at a service station, choked, robbed of $10 and also blinded.

Detective Lieut. Andrew Sparacino theorized that the bandit blinded his victims so that they could not identify him later.

Paro, meanwhile, was reported in critical condition in hospital. Investigators said they were unable to question him because he was delirous.

Schafer's condition was listed as good.

Police said that in both holdups no weapon was used, and fingers were used to blind the victims.

Leader Don Braun awaits approval . . . . . on zoning of home to "half-way" house for former mental patients

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The aging tree-hidden house lies on the corner of Foul Bay and Granite.

It might become Oak Bay's first intermediate care centre for mental patients leaving the Eric Martin Institute to try and find their way back into the main stream of society.

Bought by the Creative Initiative Society, the house is being cleaned, walls whitewashed, and garbage carted away.

The society consists of four young men, three of them former patients, and legal secretary Jane Williams.

The men are Don Braun; Ken Chernoff, who's turned his back on his music profession to help; Michael van Godoever and Greg Howarth.

Their goal?

To help cut down the staggering statistics of patients who return to EMI time and time again, unable to make the rehabilitation road.

The group has had a bumpy ride since it tried to start a centre.

★ ★ ★

Braun said people are unwilling to rent when they find out why the premises are needed. This is why they've bought the house at 1010 Foul Bay.

They're not out of the woods yet.

In order to get a provincial licence to operate, the CIS has to persuade Oak Bay council to rezone that corner. The application is before council.

Van Godoever can see no reason why the rezoning shouldn't be granted "when there's an A & W stand down the street and an apartment across the way."

Braun said statistics show that one out of every five persons ends up in a mental institution at some time or another, and insists that Oak Bay is no more immune than other municipalities.

"I know five persons in Oak Bay who have been in EMI five or six times," he said "I know a doctor who's been back for the third time, another's a builder and one is the wife of a former lawyer."

He, himself, recalls the time he rented a room on St. Patrick, was so depressed one day that he went down to the beach to "end things." He would have, he said, "but I didn't have the guts."

Braun said two psychiatric nurses at EMI have volunteered to visit the centre daily. Two psychiatrists and two psychologists have also offered their services.

Braun and his co-workers, however, feel the maim value of the centre is that it will be operated by people who have personal experience of the anguish and doubts faced by those they are trying to help.

"There's no barrier here, no professional-patient relationship where there's always that difference, a looking up and down process."

He and Chernoff said ex-patients will be referred to them by the Canadian Mental Health Association and will have no illusions about what lies ahead.

"We talk to them before they come here," Braun said, "and let them know what it's all about. People come here to work, they don't mope in their rooms. Nobody is assigned special duties. We will all take a hand at cooking, cleaning up and building."

He said the creative arts will be a base of their rehabilitation program. Craft shops and a sound-proof music room will be built in the basement.

A huge room on the main floor will house an art gallery, dining room and such "interaction" activities as dances and "drop-in" hours. They intend to build their own furniture.

"There'll be no mutual mollycoddling.

"We help each other look at ourselves. There can be no bull, no lies. You have to be honest," said Braun.

How do their immediate neighbors feel about having the centre next door?

Braun said they're all in favor and points to some curtains donated by a nurse who lives next door.

Chernoff said as soon as they have things straightened away they plan to throw a neighborhood party.

They don't know if Oak Bay council will grant the rezoning.

"But I do know that we're living in a sick society — Oak Bay, Victoria — Canada. We need these places. You just don't sweep people in need under the rug," said Chernoff.

Oak Bay MLA Dr. G. Scott Wallace shares their conviction that intermediate care for discharged mental patients is sadly lacking.

"Stressing that he's not conversant with all the facts surrounding the proposed CIA centre, Wallace said:

"In a general way I am very much in favor of creating this kind of facility, for which the need is tremendous.

"It costs only $6 a day to keep someone in one of these centres compared to damn close to $60 a day at EMI."

He intends to contact the CIS to see what can be done.

The next step, though, is up to Oak Bay council.

Braun and his friends hope that step will be in their direction.

Girls Join Military Life

Only 'Things Biological' Will Separate Duties

Twenty-five girls had their first lick of military life today and liked what they savored.

They are part of the 174-strong contingent, given employment under the federal government's summer student militia training program.

They paraded at Bay Street Armory with their male counterparts, receiving issues of clothing and military mentoring.

They'll continue to receive the latter until Aug. 23.

The military scene apparently attracts the modern female. The officer in charge of the program said he has 37 more girls on his waiting list that he'd have enlisted if the money had been available.

Col. Owen Browne, a retired officer from the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry in Calgary, said the girls will be doing everything the boys do — except when "things biological" call for alternate skills.

Running through the itinerary, it would appear this means that the girls will parade — minus small arms — while the boys shoulder arms with the best of them.

They will be allowed — but not ordered — to try their hand at rifle and submachine firing at Heal's Range.

There'll be little discrimination, either, when the last, and possibly, the most challenging part of the program starts Aug. 16.

They'll be part of the contingent that heads for Port Alberni aboard a destroyer-escort and two minesweepers.

They'll march five miles inland to an abandoned logging area for a few days training in bush survival and other techniques. They'll learn how to live under shelter of pine boughs and other growth and feed on Krations.

"It will be no gourmet camp," said Browne.

If there's one big difference between the two sexes' programs it is the "open house". the girls will be asked to put on as an extra Aug. 23 at Work Point Barracks.

Describing it as a "challenge for the girls on closing day." Browne said they will be asked to do all the planning, organizing — carry out a sports tabloid and regale their guests with refreshments.

Vive la difference!

Four-Year Term Given Fleet Club Arsonist

By DAVID CLIMENHAGA
Times Staff

A 53-year-old Esquimalt man, convicted of starting a fire at the Fleet Club building in the Naden base of CFB Esquimalt, today was sentenced to four years in prison by Judge Tyrwhitt-Drake in Victoria county court.

The court dismissed an application by two insurance companies, Lloyds of London and Norwich Union Insurance that Gordon Allen McLaughlin of 1355 Lyall Street pay $41,819.90 for items destroyed in the fire.

Judge Tyrwhitt-Drake said the evidence presented by the insurance companies was "thin."

"There was not enough evidence before me to make a decision," he said.

The judge said the insurance companies' counsel had not proven that the insurance companies were persons and that they were grieved as is required under the criminal Code.

The insurance companies applied for compensation under a section of the Code that permits a court to order someone convicted of an indictable offence "to pay . . . an amount by way of satisfaction or compensation for loss of or damage to property" caused by the crime.

Insurance adjuster Clarence James Eisler testified earlier that he had made an inventory of the building's contents after the Oct. 24 fire.

The total loss was $46,819.90, he said, but the insurance premium specified $5,000 deductible so only $41,819.90 was asked by the companies.

The sum represented the loss of the building's contents, not the building itself since Lloyds and Norwich did not insure the building.

DAD'S CAR ROLLS ON TOT'S STOMACH

Two-year-old Mark O'Neill is in good condition and improving in Queen Victoria General Hospital today after his father's car rolled over him in the driveway of their home at 905 Ellery Sunday afternoon.

Michael O'Neill's car was parked with no one inside when it backed over the child's stomach. Mark's mother, who is expecting another child in a month, was treated for shock.

Aldermen Divided On New Sign Policy

Victoria aldermen appeared to be divided in their opinions today on the city's get-tough policy with regard to advertising signs.

After hearing submissions from sign and tourist industry representatives, protesting proposed amendments to the sign bylaw, some members of the public works committee said they thought valid points had been made.

But others, notably Ald. Clyde Savage, indicated they will continue to press for a firm policy of eliminating large, visually offending signs.

Said Savage: "You either stand on your two feet and say you're not going to give way, or you give an inch here and an inch there and end up with a worse bylaw than we have now."

Committee chairman Ald. Percy Frampton said council was taking a "major step" which in previous years it had not had the "guts" to tackle.

"If we can take the billboards and wall signs out there will be a terrific improvement in the city of Victoria," Frampton added.

However, the committee tabled action on the bylaw amendments to receive further submissions from affected parties, including the National Advertising Association.

Ald. Harold Olafson appealed for members of the public to come forward and state their views on what council was trying to achieve, "so that we can see if we're on the right track."

Most of the 90-minute meeting was taken up with presentation of a lengthy brief by Wilf Fraser, representing Neon Products of Canada Ltd.

Commenting on the city's proposal to phase out all standard billboards over a three-year period, Fraser suggested that the present 115 billboards in Victoria be replaced by 40 or 50 three-faced "prismatic-type" signs located in busy commercial and industrial areas.

He said this type of sign had gained widespread acceptance, and his firm was prepared to make the change at a cost of $250,000 over a period of up to five years.

Among other recommendations, Fraser proposed that instead of phasing out third-party signs over three years, such signs should become non-conforming.

Normal building activity would reduce the number of signs if this policy was adopted, he said.

Representatives of some tourist attractions in the city told the committee their business would be affected if the legislation were adopted.

SIX OF EIGHT DUCKLINGS DIE

Six of the eight ducklings hatched by incubator last month after rescue from a construction site have died, the SPCA reported today.

Cause of their death isn't known, said secretary-manager Dave Beechin. The remaining two are thriving and have moved into outdoor quarters at the SPCA shelter on Napier Lane.

The ducklings' mother achieved local fame last month when she stubbornly refused otbudge from her nest of 10 eggs, despite rock drilling and blasting which crept closer and closer.

Eventually her nest had to be moved to make way for the excavation work and the mother Mallard deserted it. The SPCA was able to hatch eight of the 10 eggs by incubator.

They're Amazed, Shocked, Dismayed

Reid Foes Shattered by 'About-Face'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Opponents of the Reid Centre expressed shock, dismay and disappointment today following the signing of a land-use contract which allows the Wharf Street development to proceed.

Several persons who had launched a protest petition to hand to Mayor Peter Pollen on his return from Europe next week said they were amazed that Acting Mayor Tom Christie had decided to sign the contract Monday.

James Gorst, of 3944 Wilkinson Road, said Christie was one of those who had joined Pollen in opposing highrise development on the waterfront.

"Now he has done a complete about-face, so I guess his integrity is blown."

The formal signing came at a brief, closed meeting of city council in Pollen's office Monday afternoon.

Christie told reporters later that none of the aldermen present — the only absentee beside Pollen was Ald. Mike Young — had changed their minds on the issue since the public hearing last month, and he saw no point in delaying the contract processing.

Officials said the action gives the final go-ahead to the controversial development; the issuing of a building permit is now a mere formality.

Christie's signature on the document (already signed by Vancouver developer J. A. Reid) also means finality for the bylaw authorizing the contract, officials explained.

Those staging a last-ditch attempt to block the Reid project had based their hopes on a provision of the Municipal Act which allows the mayor to return a bylaw for reconsideration within 30 days of its adoption.

But this avenue, apparently, is now closed.

Monte Vanton, 2236 Arbutus, one of the most outspoken critics of the proposed two tower complex, said today he was "bloody dismayed" at the council action.

"This (the Reid Centre) is the Miami-Acapulco concept," he said. "Highrises on the waterfront made those cities disgusting and it's tragic to see Victoria headed the same way."

Vanton expressed disappointment that those organizing the campaign of opposition had not come up with a more "dynamic" program to arouse public attitudes.

Sam Lane, president of the Victoria Visitors Bureau, describes Christie's signing as "one of the most catastrophic actions" ever taken by a council in the city's history.

"Future generations will live to regret this," he added.

Following Monday's meeting Christie said he felt it would have been "pointless and useless" for him to return the bylaw to council, and noted that there was no official notification to city hall that any protest petition was being organized.

In any case, he added, he didn't know if "the petition has any credibility or not."

Christie pointed out that when a visitors' comment book was made available at city hall together with a model and plans of the development, 66 per cent of the remarks entered were in favor of the Reid Centre.

GARDENING

Wallflowers, Stock Need Pricking Out

Gardeners who sowed seeds in early June of biennial wallflowers, Brompton stock, forgetmenots and Canterbury-bells will now have seedlings with four or six leaves.

Since they are either in flats outdoors or in "nursery" rows they will be sturdy and lack the annoying spindling too common among amateur's seedlings.

While still small, preferably with no more than four leaves, prick out (move) enough seedlings of each kind for your planting needs. The new space will be the "growing" rows, so give them about five inches between seedlings all ways.

The soil will need four inches of humus, but no peatmoss, since wallflowers and stocks belong in the vast Crucifer, or Cabbage, Family all of which may develop diseases in acid soil. Dust a little lime along the rows so that it goes down around the seedling roots as you plant.

★ ★ ★

Make each seedling reasonably firm; then water as you finish putting in each dozen seedlings.

If you have mixed colors of wallflowers or stocks or Canterbury-bells, select seedlings of all sizes — not only the largest. Using this method, you have a chance of getting a mixed planting in bloom. Foliage differences can be detected at seeding stage as your experience increases from observation.

By the first week of September while your gardening enthusiasm is still high, these biennial plants must be moved to the beds or borders where you want them to flower next spring.

Left until later September or even November as many gardeners do, these growing young plants fail to become re-established before winter. They fail to produce the expected results in color and haunting fragrance, so biennials are written off as failures.

★ ★ ★

This is the perfect climate for biennials, for our usual mild winters with short periods of frost are to their liking. Even though covered with snow for a while, the plants survive to make flower buds in late March and April.

If these plants develop woody stems they have less chance of survival, which is the reason we emphasize the early pricking out of seedlings, the good culture in summer and the early September final planting.

With a complete root system in each shovel of soil as you make that final planting, your biennials will never know they have been moved. Spring bulbs can be put into the spades between and you have a pleasant prospect all winter for encouragement. The glory of fulfillment comes in spring.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

By FRED KARPIN

As all bridge players know through bitter experiences, there are days when one gets to an obviously hopeless contract. In these circumstances, the experienced player has learned how to "create" the only set-up, the then proceeds to play on the assumption that his creation is reality. Today's deal illustrates this point.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

Actually, South should have passed North's invitational rebid of two notrump. Although a point in excess of the 13 required for a minumum opening bid, South really did have a minimum hand, with eight of his cards being a seven-spot of lower. From South's position, if North couldn't bid three notrump over one notrump, then three notrump didn't figure to be makable.

West's jack-of-hearts opening lead was covered by dummy's queen, and taken by East's ace. East returned a heart, West's nine being captured by the board's king. As is rather apparent, declarer didn't care for his position, the reason for his dislike being an insufficiency of tricks.

As declarer correctly appraised his position, the only chance he had to fulfill the contract was to bring home four spade tricks. For this to be accomplished, a couple of favorable things had to exist. First, the six adversely-held spades had to be divided 3-3; and, of equal necessity, West had to possess, specifically, the tripleton K-x-x of spades. In a word, to make the required four spade tricks, declarer had to be lucky.

At trick three, declarer led the deuce of spades out of the dummy, and put up the seven-spot after East had followed suit with the five. Upon capturing this trick with his eight, West then cashed two heart tricks. He then exited with a club, East's queen falling to South's king.

Declarer now led his remaining spade and inserted dummy's queen when West followed suit with the ten. He breathed a sigh of relief when the queen won the trick (had East possessed the king, dummy's ace of spades would have been uncashable).

Dummy's ace of spades was cashed next, East's jack and West's king falling on this trick. Declarer was no whome with his contract, since dummy's two remaining spades were winners.

89th YEAR No. 27 VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, JULY 11 1972 ★★★★ 10 CENTS DAILY, 20 CENTS SATURDAY

BITE-SIZE ECLIPSE was not seen by Victorians Monday night because of cloud conditions. But Times photographer Bill Halkett using secret photography devices (nine-tenths imagination, one-tenth technology) managed to block out all but three cirrus wisps and snapped the celestial dragon chewing the moon into a partial eclipse. Astronomers have no appetites for scientific pies in the sky, yet who would doubt the sign of a hungry dragon?

June Unemployment Highest Ever

Times News Services

Unemployment across Canada jumped by 17,000 to 658,000 in June, the highest figure ever for that month, Statistics Canada reported today.

In June last year, the number of people without jobs was 551,000, or 6.2 per cent of the labor force. In percentage terms, however, unemployment this June was the same as June 1971, as the number of persons in the labor force increased.

Unemployment in British Columbia increased from 66,000 (7.1 per cent in June last year to 75,000 (7.7 per cent) this year. The June percentage was down from 8 per cent in May.

The increase across Canada occurred despite a greater-than-usual gain last month in over-all employment. But the creation of new jobs failed to catch up to the growing number of job-seekers.

There was a larger-than-usual increase in employment in manufacturing, and more jobs were spread through all other industries, though the increase in government employment was less than usual.

There were an estimated 320,000 unemployed young people, aged up to 24, and the unemployment rate in that age bracket rose to 12.4 per cent in June from 11.3 in May.

Unemployment for the 25-and-older workers declined to 249,000 in June from 283,000 in May, but remained above the June figure last year, 238,000. This meant that the unemployment rate for that group declined to 3.8 per cent from 4.3 per cent in May. It was 3.7 per cent in June last year.

The problem showed in the usual spring influx into the labor force of students — 14 to 19 — looking for either full-time or summer jobs.

In June this year, 47.5 per cent of all teen-aged boys in the country, and 35.1 per cent of all teen-aged girls, were either working or looking for work.

These rates compared with 36.5 and 28.1, respectively, only two months earlier when school was in. Both rates were higher this year than in June, 1971.

The number of unemployed teen-aged boys rose last month to 118,000 from 77,000 in May, and the number of unemployed teen-aged girls jumped to 66,000 from 45,000.

The labor force — employed and unemployed — rose to nearly 9.15 million last month from 8.89 million in May and 8.86 million in June last year. This was an increase of 3.3 per cent in the year.

The number of workers employed also rose 3.3 per cent in the year, to 8.58 million in June this year from 8.30 million a year earlier. It was 8.34 million in May this year.

Mass Jail Escape At Millhaven

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Two escaped convicts were recaptured today as police armed with shotguns and high-powered rifles continued to track 12 of 14 dangerous prisoners — two of them convicted murderers — who cut their way out of Millhaven penitentiary in Canada's largest prison break on record.

Robert Clark, 38, of Tillsonburg, Ont., serving a life sentence, was captured by police and prison guards in a wooded area near the Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. plant about three miles from the prison.

Earlier, police captured convicted murderer Edward Woods, 26, of Burlington, Ont., after he tried to crash a roadblock at Odessa on Highway 2, five miles north of the prison.

No details were available on the Clark capture which came after police moved in on woods near the cement plant.

Woods was caught after police cruisers forced a stolen truck he was driving onto a lawn and officers wrestled him to the ground. A passenger escaped by running down a creek bed.

The 14 prisoners broke out of the maximum-security prison Monday night by cutting through a chain link fence.

Three of the escapers were convicted murderers and two of them are still at large. Of the others, police list most as dangerous.

An area within a radius of 20 miles from the prison has been sealed off by cruisers, boats and aircraft and the convicts are still believed to be within five miles of the prison.

Many of the prisoners at Millhaven were taken there after a four-day rebellion by 500 prisoners at nearby Kingston penitentiary in April, 1971, left two convicts dead, the institution wrecked and 10 other prisoners injured.

CONVICTED MURDERER Edward Woods, one of 14 men who snipped their way to freedom from Ontario's maximum-security Millhaven penitentiary, was the first escaper recaptured when he tried to run a police roadblock five miles from the prison.

McGovern Clinches Nomination

Times News Services

MIAMI BEACH — Senator George McGovern clinched the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination today, going over the top minutes after his rivals Senators Hubert Humphrey and Edmund Muskie withdrew from the race.

An Associated Press poll showed a combination of newly-attracted delegates plus one-time supporters of Humphrey and Muskie added up to a first-ballot victory for McGovern.

"After consultation with some of my closest friends and supporters, I have determined that I will not permit my name to be entered in nomination at the convention, and I am now releasing my delegates to vote as they wish," Humphrey said.

Muskie said he was quitting because it was apparent that McGovern was going to be the nominee. Under these circumstances, Muskie said, there was no point in having his name even introduced into nomination.

Humphrey's decision virtually assures McGovern of a first-ballot win when voting for the party's presidential nominee begins Wednesday evening.

McGovern just 43 votes short of the 1,509 needed for victory and Humphrey's 429-plus delegates, many of them almost sure to back him, will put him easily past the required quota.

According to associates, Humphrey decided to pull out of the race following George McGovern's decisive victory in the crucial California credentials fight.

Humphrey aides said he felt it was an indication that the South Dakotan had the votes to capture the nomination.

McGovern recaptured 151 California delegates with stunning ease early today, halting Humphrey's coalition of old-line Democrats dead in its tracks about five hours after the first gavel fell starting the party's "new look" nominating convention.

He triumphed by an unofficial tally of 1,618 to 1,239 — far more than the 1,433-vote majority required under ground rules laid down by party chairman Lawrence O'Brien.

McGovern had contended throughout his battle that Humphrey, teaming with most of his other competitors, had unfairly upset the winner-take-all rule in California after agreeing in advance to accept the primary results.

'GREAT ESCAPE' A SINKING FLOP

LAKE GEORGE, N.Y. (UPI) — Escape artist Mario Manzini had one of those days Monday.

As promised, the 30-year-old Manzini allowed himself to be handcuffed, leg-ironed and placed in a packing crate which was then nailed shut and lowered into Lake George.

Also as promised, he escaped from the box in less than 90 seconds.

So far, so good. Except for several small problems.

All of the 500 persons who had gathered on the dock to witness the great escape patterned after the stunt by the late Harry Houdini, could hear and see exactly how it was done.

First of all, as the box was being nailed shut, the sound of shackles being removed inside could be heard loud and clear. Then the box wouldn't sink and bobbed around on the surface.

Suddenly, a concealed door in the box popped open and Mancini popped out, in full view of all.

Fallers Put IWA Out on Limb

Determination by fallers to continue their walkout is likely to render academic the narrow vote in favor of a new contract by coast members of the International Woodworkers of America.

Representatives of the 115 companies were meeting in Vancouver this afternoon to vote on a recommendation by their bargaining agent, Forest Industrial Relations, that they also accept the new contract.

Fallers, however, remain adamant that they want a standardized pricing formula for their varying piece-rates, and not the day wage rate proposed in the settlement.

The official IWA vote was to be announced today. Unofficially, the union announced that 6,730 were in favor and 5,915 opposed, or 53 per cent. Roughly half the IWA members didn't vote.

At noon, a brief IWA statement said the coast negotiating committee "has advised FIR the union membership has accepted the proposed settlement.

"However, union picket lines will be maintained until such time as the industry has announced its acceptance."

The companies' vote was also expected to be announced late today.

But if the fallers don't go back to work, log shortages evident before the official IWA strike began June 22 will worsen. Eight hundred fallers began walking out last April.

FLQ Man Protected

MONTREAL (CP) — One of the first Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists is protected by special status under France's foreign affairs ministry, according to a local newspaper. The weekly tabloid Photo Journal says Richard Bizier, 27, has been granted status and documents as a Canadian refugee which prevent him from being extradited to Canada from any country without the approval of the French foreign ministry.

The newspaper says Bizier sought political asylum in the islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon, French territory off Newfoundland, while on bail facing charges in connection with the 1968 St. Jean Baptiste Day riot.

Bizier was charged with disturbing a public gathering and participating in a riot. A warrant for his arrest is outstanding.

A spokesman for the newspaper said Bizier hid for some time in Quebec's Abitibi region and made it to French territory by mid-1970.

Bizier served four months of a six-month sentence for placing a time bomb at an RCAF building in 1963 during the first wave of FLQ bombings.

The newspaper says Bizier was issued documents Nov. 26, 1971, by the French Office for the Protection of Refugees and Stateless Persons.

BORIS BEGINS WITHOUT BOBBY

REYKJAVIK (AP) — World championship chess began today without Bobby Fischer, the American challenger.

He showed up seven minutes after Soviet titleholder Boris Spassky made the first move.

It seemed another one of these psychological ploys that chess masters often use in an attempt to unsettle their opponents.

Spassky was there on the dot, waited a minute, then calmly pushed his queen's pawn forward two spaces.

Referee Lothar Schmid of West Germany pushed the button on the time clock and the match had begun.

Seven minutes later Fischer appeared.

With long strides he sped to the black leather swivel chair placed behind the white side of the board.

Applause, which greeted Fischer's arrival, increased when Spassky moved forward from the side of the stage where he had been waiting to shake Fischer's hand.

The American took a minute to regard the board and the queen's pawn opening Spassky favors.

He moved his king's side knight to the queen bishop three square.

Melon Bombs Out

Times News Services

That watermelon — bomb which landed on the front pages in Canada and the U.S. yesterday, Monday night went S-P-L-A-T-T . . . all over the faces of several Los Angeles police officers.

They're the policemen who conned newsmen into believing that a giant watermelon brought into a precinct house for a snack by two patrolmen was actually evidence in a case of "assault with a deadly watermelon," and had been dropped with felonious intent on the head of an area resident by a peeved girl friend.

However, further investigation into the case by senior detectives showed that the alleged occurrence never took place. As a result, several officers face suspensions without pay for the hoax.

So, unfortunately, the Great Melon Caper just doesn't hold water.

Protestants Menace IRA

Times News Services

BELFAST — Tough-talking Protestants threatened today to "eliminate" the Irish Republican Army if the British army does not take action against the "murderers and rebels."

"Unless the army takes the initiative, we will take steps to eliminate the IRA ourselves," the Ulster Defence Association declared in a statement.

The grim warning came on the eve of Wednesday's Orange Order parades, planned to commemorate the 1690 Battle of the Boyne which established Protestant domination over Northern Ireland's Catholics. In past years, the parades have sparked violence.

About 500 additional British soldiers are to arrive in Ireland today. Another 700 will follow later, bringing to 17,000 the number of soldiers on duty there.

The UDA, whose leaders claim they can call up 40,000 armed men, denounced the 13-day IRA ceasefire which ended Sunday. They called on Northern Ireland secretary William Whitelaw not to negotiate with the IRA, "who are nothing but murderers and rebels."

In response to the UDA "elimination" threat, a rank-and-file IRA member commented: "This is the sort of thing we have been expecting for some time now. We're not really worried but we see it as our clear duty to defend our areas."

The body of a young man, hooded and gagged, was found early today in Carlisle Circus, a predominantly Protestant neighborhood.

Sporadic gunfire continued through the night in several areas of Belfast, and just after midnight a 100-pound bomb demolished shops near the Roman Catholic Unity Flats housing block. One bystander was slightly injured.

In London, the disclosure by William Whitelaw that he met representatives of the underground Irish Republican Army in his capacity as minister of Ulster affairs won support from the opposition Labor party but stirred hostile reaction in some Conservative quarters.

Denied Lawyer, Man Beats .08

HALIFAX (CP) — A charge of driving with a blood alcohol level of more than .08 was dismissed in court Monday when the defendant said he was not permitted to call a lawyer.

It was the first breath analysis machine case here since the Supreme Court of Canada recently ruled that a person has a right to call a lawyer before taking a breath test.

Crown Prosecutor Dick Hubley said he would appeal the decision.

BANDIT BLINDS VICTIMS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Police are searching for a bandit who they said gouged out the eyes of two of his holdup victims after robbing them of small amounts.

Investigators said Monday they are "quite sure" that grocer Samuel C. Schafer, 72, and gasoline station attendant Robert Paro, 19, were victims of the same bandit, although a second man was with him during the attack on Paro.

Schafer was choked, robbed of $21 and blinded early Sunday at his grocery store.

Before dawn Monday, less than 24 hours later, Paro was accosted at a service station, choked, robbed of $10 and also blinded.

Detective Lieut. Andrew Sparacino theorized that the bandit blinded his victims so that they could not identify him later.

Paro, meanwhile, was reported in critical condition in hospital. Investigators said they were unable to question him because he was delerious.

Schafer's condition was listed as good.

Police said that in both holdups no weapon was used, and fingers were used to blind the victims.
